'Ugly American' Real
STANFORD (AP) — Carlos P. Romulo declared today many thinking Asians feel "the image of the 'Ugly American' has stepped out of the world of myth into reality."

"In the case of the American in Asia, enough irritants crop up to produce no end of unpleasantness, even outright antagonism against America," Romulo said in an address prepared for the Conference on Education Investment in the Pacific Communities.

Romulo, former Philippines ambassador to the United Nations, now is president of the University of the Philippines.

He declared Asian nations feel misgivings that huge United States commitments for aiding education in Asia are tied to economic and military policies.

The Beardsleys had a child of their own last year, bringing the family total to 19.

Progressives Given Knock By Rafferty

Dr. Maxwell Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction, in San Rafael today called for a 180-degree swing from progressive education philosophy to "education in depth."

Rafferty said teachers must be artists, and he compared their art to that of an orchestra conductor who must "evoke chords that will ring grandly through the harmony of life."

He lashed "fuzzy thinking" of progressive education, which he said has no other aim than to prepare children for "life adjustment."

He defined "education in depth" as the teaching of "organized, disciplined and systematic subject matter."

Many educators today believe that the flame of education has gone out, that there is no torch to pass on and that there never was a torch, he said.

This attitude has turned away many potential teachers. It has also forced many top people in the profession to leave for jobs in science and industry, he said.

"More money is usually given as the reason," Rafferty said, but "teachers' salaries are at an all-time high and they are rising rapidly." The reason, he said, goes deeper than money.

He said the profession of education is fast becoming a cult with "meaningless" terms and catch words. He spoke of "in-grouping" as the phrase which has led the progressive philosophy.

He called for "surgery" on educational terminology, deleting such words as "auding" for listening. He brought laughs when he quoted an educator who said he would "resonate" to a suggestion.

He said such terms were a good way of alienating the people.

Rafferty deplored that there are no "cultural tests" for school administrators. They know about finances, building schools, the tax rates, but they need know nothing about music art or any other "subject matter," he continued.

He said the people want the leading educators in their communities to stand for their ideals of culture.

Rafferty also deplored a "boycott" by leading educators of the Fisher Bill, enacted by the Legislature in 1961 to make subject matter a stronger part of teacher education and do away with "redundancies" in which similar courses on edu-

Dark Cloud Lingering Over Marin

Dark storm clouds lingered over Marin County today in the wake of the week's heavy spring storm, but chances of more rain for the weekend were diminishing.

Since yesterday, there were only light showers. The weatherman said probability of rain tomorrow was reduced to 40 per cent.

Forest Knolls which had the highest total from the storm—5.26 inches—had only a trace since 8 a.m. yesterday. Woodacre reported .15 of an inch; Novato, .10 Chevy Chase in Larkspur, .09 and San Anselmo, .05.

San Rafael, with only a trace since noon yesterday, now has a seasonal total of 40.03 inches compared with 36.91 at this time last year.

Missing Girl Is Believed Kidnap Victim

The week-long search for 5-year-old Doreen Heskett of Napa today appeared to be narrowing to a dead end—and the conclusion that the blonde, blue-eyed child was kidnaped.

One "live" lead still remained as police searched the Oroville area for a 20-year-old hot-rodder with a stack of unanswered traffic citations.

The youth, a former neighbor of the Hesketts, was reported seen around Napa in the past few days.

The fruitless search swung briefly to San Rafael yesterday with the report that a girl answering Doreen's description was seen in Macy's department store Thursday with a man about 50 years old.

San Rafael police checked out the tip at the request of Napa Police Chief Sherwood Munk, but found the man was a Belvedere resident buying clothes for his small daughter.

Another lead provided by a Napa schoolteacher also proved unfounded, Munk said today. Mrs. Gladys Krieger, the teacher, told police she had seen a girl and a man in his 40s sitting in a car next to hers Monday night in the Redwood Junior High School parking lot in Napa.

A woman from Angwin, reading of this, came forth with the explanation that the man was her husband and that he was with their son and two nieces.

Rocket Engine Tests Off Angel Island Requested

Marinites Told No Hazards Involved

Aerojet-General Corp. has filed application with the Army Corps of Engineers for permission to conduct a series of static firing tests of underwater rocket engines off Angel Island and the Point Richmond coast.

The tests would apparently be in connection with Aerojet-General's use of the Tiburon Naval Net Depot for research on development of the Corporal missile, an early Army missile, for underwater use. Aerojet-General and the Navy Department have both assured concerned Marinites that the Tiburon research would involve no hazards.

The Army Engineers' announcement of the application today specified, however:

"Patrol boats provided by the applicant would police the perimeter of the test area during the test period to divert navigation. Advance notice of all tests would be published in the U.S. Coast Guard's 'Local Notice to Mariners.'"

The series would consist of 10 tests, one each month, starting about June 1. The first four would be off Point Richmond; the last six, off Angel Island. Tests would be conducted during daylight, the application specifies. The Army Engineers' announcement gave no indication of how many firings would be included in each test.

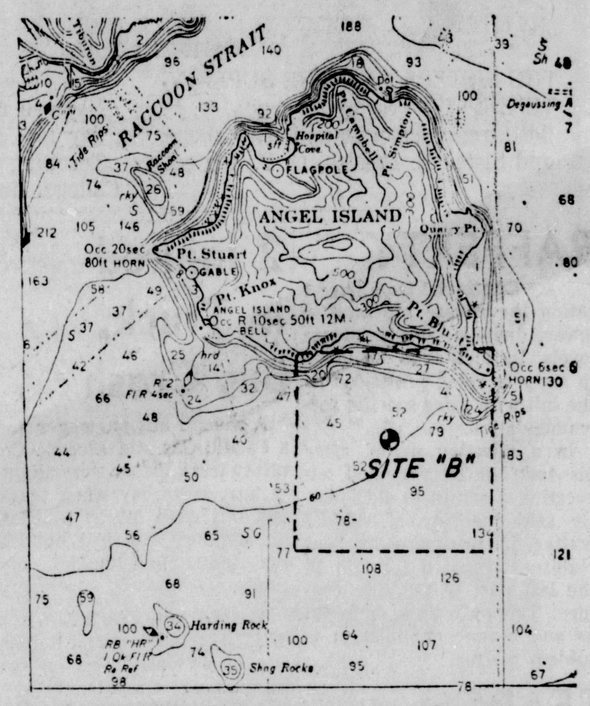

The area to be policed as possibly hazardous to navigation would be about one mile square at each of the two test sites, a map accompanying the application announcement showed.

"Site A" extends from the entrance channel to the Richmond oil terminals south and east into the bay, including about half of Southampton Shoal.

For the tests, the Army announcement specified, "the test engine would be securely mounted on one end of a specially equipped barge moored in the center of the test site." The engines would be liquid-

Warships May Block Cuba Exiles

CHICAGO (AP) — President John F. Kennedy may order U. S. warships to patrol against exiles using American territory for launching raids on Cuba, the Chicago Sun-Times reported today.

In a dispatch from the Sun-Times bureau in Washington, the newspaper quoted an unidentified U. S. official as saying, "As of this moment, there is no plan to call out the fleet." But the newspaper said his words seemed to suggest such a development may be near.

The report seemed to receive support from Edwin M. Martin, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, the Sun-Times said.

In a radio interview, Martin said, "I feel sure there will be efforts made to increase the surveillance to ensure that U. S. territory is not utilized by raiders in the future, whether it has been or not in the past."

Some Congressmen have commented that a series of raids by the exiles on Cuban territory and Soviet vessels may have prompted the firing of Cuban MIG fighters on the U. S. motorship Floridian Thursday night.

In Washington, the latest Cuban squall—with more thunder than lightning—seemed to have all passed over today.

Tension over Thursday night's MIG attack on an American cargo ship dropped sharply after a swift note from Cuba saying the Russian-built fighters "probably fired in error."

Marin Grand Jury Secretary Is Named

Donald F. Donohue, Novato theater owner, was elected Thursday night as secretary of the 1963 Marin County Grand Jury.

The 19 members of the new grand jury, headed by foreman Edwin A. Wells, then got right into business, bringing two indictments.

One indictment, signed last night, charges Robert Gene Glover, a San Quentin Prison life termer, with assault with a deadly weapon against another inmate last Nov. 4. Glover is serving a life term for robberies in Kern County and sex perversion in Solano County.

The other indictment accuses former San Quentin Correctional Officer Robert W. Minor, 29, of San Francisco with conspiracy to forge payroll checks at the prison print shop.

Minor was indicted on the same charge last September by the previous grand jury. Deputy Dist. Atty. Charles L. Convis explained that the case had to go before the new grand jury because of a technical flaw in the previous indictment.

Dist. Atty. Roger P. Garety and Convis presented the two criminal cases to the grand jury.

Mother Says Girl's Survival In Wilderness Is Gift From Heaven

NEW YORK (AP)—Helen Kalben, 21, the Brooklyn girl who survived 49 days of incredible hardship after a plane crash in the Canadian wilderness, cried with joy today when she arrived at Idlewild Airport and was reunited with her family.

"Oh Mother!" she exclaimed.

"I'm coming, I'm coming," the mother, Ida, cried as she rushed to a mobile stretcher on which her smiling daughter lay.

"My precious darling," the mother gasped as they embraced and murmured endearments to each other.

Mrs. Klaben, who had spent long hours at the airport awaiting the return of a daughter she had never expected to see again, said "You're a gift from Heaven—from God. I missed you so much. Now I have you again."

Ralph Flores, the San Bruno, Calif., pilot rescued with Miss Klaben, remained in a White-horse hospital.

Mrs. Klaben stood by, clasping her daughter's hand, as the latter talked. After talking with newsmen, Miss Klaben was wheeled on the stretcher to a waiting vehicle to be taken to Columbia Presbyterian Hospital.

Miss Klaben, who seemed rested despite her long trip, said that she plans to continue her adventures but will stay home for awhile. She added that she has no beau, but said in answer to another question. "Of course I would like to get married."

Doctors have said Miss Klaben may lose her frostbitten five right toes. Flores' smashed right jaw will remain slightly misshapen.

4 Rescued From Overturned Boat

Four persons were rescued by Coast Guard helicopter today after clinging for an hour to their overturned sailboat at Tomales Bay.

The Coast Guard identified them as Nathan Fay, Tom Turnbull and Wayne Vaughn, all of Napa, and Stewart R. Stewart of Vallejo.

"They were all in good condition," a Coast Guard spokesman said.

He said their 18-foot red catamaran overturned, but a sand bar across the bay entrance prevented surface craft from rescuing them.

Children Bring Books To Life For Fellow Pupils At Mill Valley School

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Penguins from "Mr. Popper's Penguins" waddled. Gehrig stepped out of the book "Lou Gehrig" to become Louie at the bat. And "Pecos Bill" tamed a wild horse right before the pupils' eyes at Mill Valley's Marin Terrace School yesterday.

These actions took place in Mrs. Glenda Sawyer's fourth grade reading class.

"The first time I suggested oral book reports, everybody groaned," said Mrs. Sawyer. But things have changed.

Youngsters are invited to tell the story of a book they've read, at the same time enacting some of the scenes. They use such mediums as puppets, shadow craft, murals, diorama and scroll movies.

For example: red-shirted Gregory Shaw stood on a chair and worked a paper puppet of Pecos Bill over a stage he had built from an old laundry hamper.

"The family is migrating to Red Gulch," said Gregory. "When the wagon goes over a rock, the baby falls out. Along comes a coyote. He sees the baby and takes him home with him. The coyote says 'Be nice to rover.' Everybody agrees except Wowser and the rattlesnake."

Pupil Larry Castano hands Gregory some props.

"Pecos Bill overpowers the horse and he becomes tame," continues Gregory. "Then Pecos Bill marries Slough-Foot Sue and she goes for a ride on Pegasus, the horse, wearing her spring steel bustles . . . and, you have to read the book to find out what happened." The audience applauds.

Larry Castano reported on "Heidi," using a mural. He was assisted by Rolin Arago. Pam Nowell told the "Wizard of Oz," assisted by Dale Bowen. Pam used a pad with pictures she had painted, folding them over to change scenes. The Muchkins and the yellow brick road were there.

Life-like stances of baseball players, made of clay and placed on a ball diamond stage, held the class's attention when Karl Herbold told the story of "Lou Gehrig."

"It ended 12-6 in favor of Louie's team," said Karl, wiggling his feet enjoyably as he has been hunting for Doreen in the Napa area and as far away as Sacramento and Sunnyvale, but without success.

Skin divers probed the murky waters of the Napa River yesterday, and others hunted in the bottoms of wells and in rain-swollen ditches and creeks.

Thursday Doreen's father, Marvin, who suffers a heart ailment, returned stunned and pale from a visit to his sick mother in McCook, Neb.

"There is always the possibility some demented woman who wanted a child took Doreen," Heskett said. "We have nine children and maybe she thought we had too many. We don't want revenge. All we want is Doreen."

Doreen's mother was named Novato "Mother of the Year" in 1959, prior to the family's moving to Napa.

Authorities are trying to find someone who saw Doreen after about 5 p.m. Monday, when teacher Charles Redd said the girl and two companions knocked at a door of the Redwood Junior High School, asking to use a dressing room. He turned them away because the school was closed.

Heskett said he and his wife had tape recorded an appeal to be broadcast in hopes that the possible abductor of the child will hear it and return her.

Napa radio station KVON announced receipt of more than $5,000 in pledges toward a reward fund for information about the girl's whereabouts.

2 Injured In Truck, Bus Crash

A woman bus passenger and a Pacific Gas and Electric Co. utility truck driver were slightly hurt yesterday when truck and bus were hit by a sedan on Highway 101 just outside the south San Rafael city limits.

Victims were Linda S. White of 138 Circle Road, San Rafael, one of 44 passengers on the southbound Greyhound bus, and Lewis Eddie Wehrer, 37, of 125 Mabry Way, San Rafael, the truck driver. Both were treated by private physicians, the California Highway Patrol said.

The driver of the car, Joseph John Whitaker, 33, of 304 First Street, San Rafael, told officers he was going north in the inside lane when it appeared that a truck ahead of him was easing into his lane. He swerved left, skidded into the guard rail, and bounced over the center divider into the southbound lanes, hitting the rear of the bus and the side of the PG&E truck. Whitaker was not hurt.

'Egg Yolk Baron' To Give Self Up

Von Salza, who sold his egg yolk treatments for as much as $25,000 to elderly Bay Area patients, was indicted by the San Francisco Grand Jury Monday. When police went to his Broadway apartment to arrest him, however, they learned that von Salza had gone to New York.

fueled—not solid-fueled or atomic. "Static firing tests" would not actually launch any missiles, merely firing the engine used as missile launcher.

The Army disclosed that Aerojet-General's application was dated March 12. Ten days after that, it was learned today, Kenneth E. Belieu, assistant secretary of the Navy, wrote Rep. Donald H. Clausen (R-Crescent City) a letter replying to several questions raised by the First District congressman regarding Aerojet-General's use of the Tiburon Net Depot.

Belieu's letter, a copy of which reached the Marin Development Assn. yesterday from Congressman Clausen, said among other things that underwater firing tests "will be conducted in the extreme North Bay area"—a description scarcely fitting Angel Island and Point Richmond.

Belieu's letter indicated that Aerojet-General has been granted only a year's lease of the net depot. Belieu wrote, "Continued use of the Tiburon facility is under review in the office of the secretary of defense."

Belieu, basing his letter on information he said was received from the chief of naval operations, answered "no" to Clausen's question as to whether proposed use of the net depot would "result in anything obnoxious or dangerous to residents."

He wrote that plans for "the initial year's work at Tiburon" involved modifying Corporal missiles to be used as waterlaunched experimental missiles.

Most of the work would be done within a building at Tiburon, he wrote. Fueling tests would be made, and missiles erected, "in a specially designated area in the bay or in the open sea well clear of the coast and other traffic." These would not involve rocket firing. Actual firing would be at the Point Mugu test site or somewhere in the Pacific Missile Range, he wrote.

"There will be no launches or dynamic firings within the bay," wrote Belieu.

The Army Engineers' announcement included the usual explanation that Army jurisdiction applies only to possible interference with navigation. Any objections to the testing on navigational grounds may be submitted in triplicate to Col. John A. Morrison, district engineer, Corps of Engineers, 180 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco, no later than April 26.

Marin Boy Wins In Science Fair

A second prize to Lonnie Masouredis of Santa Venetia Junior High School topped Marin County wins last night at the Bay Area Science Fair in San Francisco.

Lonnie's exhibit of the effect of pressure on gas discharge, which was one of three grand prize winners at the Marin County Science Fair March 8, won a second place for eighth grade physical science exhibits at the fair at the California Academy of Sciences in Golden Gate Park. The entries were winners in competitions including about 450 schools.

Lonnie is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Serafeim P. Masouredis of 9 DeAnza Way, Los Ranchitos.

Senior grand prizes in the Bay Area fair went to Michael Kaku of Cubberley High School, Palo Alto, in physical sciences, and Robert E. Wray of Fremont High School, Oakland, in biological sciences. Grand prize winners in the junior high division (including ninth grades) were Judy Rupert of Mount Eden Junior High School, Hayward, in biological sciences, and Larry G. Shreve of Goodwin Junior High School, Redwood City, in physical sciences.

Marin prize winners, besides young Masouredis, were:

Paul M. Priebe Jr. of San Rafael High School, fourth place in 11th grade biological sciences.

Robert M. Pasqualetti of Marin Catholic High School, merit award in 10th grade physical sciences.

Barry Dean Stockwell of Henry C. Hall School, Larkspur, fourth place in eighth grade physical sciences.

Janitor Is Jailed For Molesting

A 28-year-old Corte Madera janitor, with a history of child molest arrests, was back in Marin County Jail today on charges of molesting a 5-year-old San Anselmo girl.

Kenneth Leroy Richards of 5116 Paradise Drive was held on $52.50 bail. He was scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court on Monday.

Sam M. Serio, assistant San Anselmo police chief, said Richards went to the home of the girl, with whose family he was friendly, on Thursday night. He watched television for a short time and then went into the child's bedroom.

The parents were not at home, Serio said, and the child's brothers and sisters were sleeeping.

Serio said Richards has been sent twice to Atascadero State Hospital for examination to determine whether he was a sexual psycopath and returned after the examinations proved he was not.

Richards has been arrested for impersonating a naval officer, petty theft and on drunk charges. He was placed on probation for offering rides to young girls in July, 1961. He faced similar charges in Marin Municipal Court in May, 1962.

He was re-arrested last June on the recommendation of Probation Officer David Cooper, who told Superior Court Judge Thomas F. Keating that he considered Richards a menace.

Serio said that Richards was released last month from the county jail after serving one year for a $260 check forgery committed in July of 1961.

The letter put six questions to R. E. Thomas, president of Western Greyhound Division, covering such points as possible new routes and terminals in San Francisco and rate adjustments on its interurban bus system between San Francisco, Marin and North Bay points.

Shop Center Due Planners

A proposed expansion of the Terra Linda Shopping Center on Freitas Parkway opposite the Terra Linda Community Center will be considered Monday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

Six new shops are planned at the center, to include a florist, barber, shoe repair shop, candy store, real estate office and insurance office.

A request for a use permit to construct the new shops has been submitted by Frank E. Hawkins. Original developer of the center was the Draper Co., now planning the Northgate Shopping Center in the San Rafael part of Terra Linda.

Principal Planner Sidney Shaw said the staff will recommend extensive changes in the proposed shop construction. He said the shops are "much too big for the site in relation to parking."

The use permit will be heard as item 16 on the agenda for the meeting which will open at 9 a.m.

Another Terra Linda matter to be considered is a proposed amendment to the Terra Linda master plan to allow a church site on a 1.18-acre parcel next to the Lutheran Church at the north end of Las Gallinas Avenue.

Harmony Baptist Church asks permission to build there. Although the proposed extension of Las Gallinas Avenue would reduce the usable land to .66 of an acre.

A request from Eichler Homes Inc. asks setback variances on 111 homes in Lucas Valley unit 4. Variances from the required 25-foot setback of from three to five feet are sought. Most of the variances would allow roof overhangs.

Mormon Fund Drive Concert Set Tonight

A building drive that would help complete one Mormon church, enlarge another and construct a third in Marin County will be helped on its way with a concert in San Francisco tonight.

The Marin projects are part of a one and one-half to two million dollar drive in the Santa Rosa Stake, which extends from the Golden Gate to Fort Bragg.

Tonight's concert will present the Mormon Choir of Southern California. It will be at 8:15 p.m. in the War Memorial Opera House.

Carl Coombs of Tiburon, first counselor of the stake, said the church in Greenbrae which now serves both the Greenbrae and San Rafael wards will be enlarged.

The new church will be in Terra Linda and will be for the San Rafael ward. Coombs said the church already owns land in Terra Linda but hopes to trade it for a different site before construction starts next summer.

The fund drive will also contribute money for the completion of the Mormon church in Novato which is planned by September.

Coombs said 250 complimentary tickets for tonight's performance have been distributed to high schools in Marin County.

To Sing Monday

The Willamette University choir from Salem, Ore., will sing at 8 p.m. Monday at Christ Presbyterian Church in Terra Linda. The choir, of which several Marin students are members, makes a spring tour of California every three years.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Knight Closes Rocky Hq.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Californians for Rockefeller Committee has faded away.

Former California Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, who opened committee headquarters Wednesday, announced yesterday he was closing shop at the request of New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller—who didn't want the headquarters opened in the first place.

Said Knight: "After conferences with Governor Rockefeller, and at his expressed wish, we are proceeding no further . . ."

Another Ole Opry Star Dies

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mrs. Ruby Fox, known as "Texas Ruby" to Grand Ole Orpy audiences, burned to death in a house trailer fire last night, county police said.

Texas Ruby

Mrs. Fox, the wife of Opry performer Curley Fox, was the sixth Opry personality to die in accidents in recent weeks.

A plane crash near Camden, Tenn. three weeks ago killed Patsy Cline, Cowboy Copas, Hawkshaw Hawkins and Randy Hughes.

A few days later Jack Anglin of the Opry singing team Johnny and Jack was killed in an auto accident while hurrying to prayer services for Miss Cline.

First Negro Honor Student

Miss Evans

Miss Evans has an A-plus grade average of 4.077 and is taking accelerated work in algebra and English.

She is one of 70 Negroes attending the integrated Little Rock schools, focal point of the 1957-59 integration crisis.

Six Die In Explosion

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An explosion leveled a large cleaning establishment yesterday, killing six persons and injuring more than 50.

The blast tossed a 220-pound chunk of reinforced concrete through the corrugated steel roof of a building 200 yards away.

Cause of the explosion was undetermined.

Burned Cross On Lawn

BERKELEY (UPI) — Three teen-age boys confessed yesterday to planting a burning cross on the lawn of Dr. Fred S. Stripp, a mayoralty candidate in Berkeley.

Stripp is an outspoken advocate of the proposed fair housing ordinance in Berkeley, which would outlaw racial and religious discrimination in housing.

The boys, all from well-to-do families, told police they placed the cross on the lawn as a prank.

'Ring Around Earth'

MOSCOW (UPI)—The official news agency Tass said today Soviet astronomer Pyotr Shcheglov believes the earth has a pancake-shaped ring around it like the planet Saturn.

The agency said Shcheglov discovered a "flat cloud of hydrogen shaped like a pancake" around the earth "at an altitude of 10,000 kilometers (6,200 miles)."

"It resembles a ring of Saturn in shape," Tass said.

Economy Run Starts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seven women and 29 men took to the highway at dawn today in 36 new American motor cars, each driver intent on winning mileage honors in the 1963 Mobil Economy Run.

Next Thursday, the sixth day of the annual competition, final tabulations will be made in Detroit to determine the winners in each of eight classes.

But before the cars reach Detroit's Cobo Hall—the end of the 2,654-mile run—overnight stops will be made in Las Vegas, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Omaha and Chicago.

Powder Puff Derby

FRESNO (UPI)—The selection of Fresno as the starting point for the 1964 Powder Puff Derby was announced today by the Fresno County and City Chamber of Commerce.

The air race take off will be at the Fresno air terminal July 4 with the coast-to-coast flight ending at Atlantic City, N.J.

New Tax Rules Not So Tough On Deductions As Thought

WASHINGTON (AP)—The men in gray flannel suits who love to grab the tax deductible luncheon check breathed more easily today—the new expense account rules are less drastic than they had feared.

The basic regulation on travel and entertainment deductions was issued yesterday by Commissioner Mortimer M. Caplin of the Internal Revenue Service. It probably did not put an end to expense account living, but it reduced that living standard somewhat.

In the 1962 tax law, Congress directed IRS to add some teeth to the old rule which made entertainment and travel costs deductible if the taxpayer showed merely that they were ordinary and necessary business expenses.

The new regulation makes it clear that entertainment outlays intended simply to foster business good will do not ordinarily qualify as deductible henceforth. But some of the most common good will expenses will still be recognized by IRS.

The "quiet" business meal—with or without martinis—remains deductible as in the past, and it isn't necessary to make a sales pitch or land an order.

However, the atmosphere in which the meal is eaten must be "generally conducive" to a business discussion, even if business isn't discussed. That means no band, vocalists, strip-teasers, or other "major distractions."

The chorus girls and Gypsy fiddles can stay in the picture if the business man's entertainment is "associated with the active conduct of trade or business" and if it directly precedes or follows a substantial and bonafide discussion.

A convention qualifies as a bona fide business discussion.

If the taxpayer shows there is a clear business purpose, he may play host at a nightclub, ball game, theater, or other entertainment spot.

If the entertainment has a business purpose, the businessman may invite his customer's wife and his own wife as well. Their food and drinks are deductible. But a wife's travel with her husband to a convention may not be deducted unless there is a business reason to come along.

She would be deductible, for instance, if she served as her husband's secretary or had a role in the convention program.

The membership dues of country clubs and the costs of operating yachts or hunting lodges would be proportionately deductible if more than 50 per cent of their use is devoted to "ordinary and necessary" business.

Limitations were set on deductions for travel when the taxpayer tacks a vacation onto his business trip, if he is away from home for more than a week and if the pleasure jaunt occupies more than 25 per cent of his total time away from home.

In such a case, he can claim a deduction only for that portion of his transportation costs and hotel bills which represent the business portion of the outing.

Last October, when IRS laid down the rules for record-keeping on outlays for business travel, entertainment and gifts, businessmen flocked to Washington to make angry protests its rigid requirements. It was toned down considerably in the final version. Yesterday's proposed regulation, it appeared, would provoke far less outcry.

Negroes Ask JFK Support

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — President John F. Kennedy has been urged to come to this Mississippi Delta city and walk with Negroes going to the county courthouse in their bid to become registered voters.

"It's the greatest thing the president of the United States can do to let the world know we believe in democracy," Wiley Branton, a Negro attorney from Atlanta, told a voter registration rally last night.

The tension eased slightly yesterday. Police kept pedestrians—both white and Negro—scattered and moving.

The Leflore County courthouse was blocked off by wooden barricades and police squad cars.

However, Police Chief Curtis Lary said Negroes were free to enter the courthouse, provided they walked in small groups instead of a mass march.

Meanwhile, Mayor C. E. Sampson charged the Justice Department with helping "professional agitators" foment racial trouble in Leflore County—where Negroes outnumber white persons nearly 2-1—in an attempt to win Negro votes.

In Washington, the Justice Department said it was awaiting word from investigators in Greenwood before deciding what action, if any, to take in the situation.

MOSK STEALS JOKE FROM GOVERNOR

The joke, as Mosk told it, went like this:

"You will recall that the comedian George Gobel once said he makes all the important policy decisions in his household. He leaves the minor decisions to his wife. She decides what kind of car they will buy, whether they should paint the house and what schools the children should attend. George decided the important questions, such as whether or not United Nations forces should be deployed in Katanga."

Brown's version—which he later trimmed from the speech because he followed Mosk — was slightly longer but virtually the same punch line.

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Game Of Bridge Was Invented For Reason: To Infuriate Us!

If you are ever asked why bridge was invented you can give the correct answer: to infuriate us.

Opening lead — ♠ 7

West leads a spade. This is pretty infuriating to begin with, since any other lead would allow South to make his grand slam very easily.

SPADE LEAD

The spade lead cuts communications between the two hands before South can clear his top clubs out of the way.

The average player would win the first trick with the king of spades and rely on winning all 13 tricks in his own hand.

The bad break in diamonds dooms this hope. South is down one if he relies on the diamonds.

EXTRA CHANCE

When this hand was played last month in the annual Intercollegiate Bridge Championships, the brillian students were expected to give themselves an extra chance.

Instead of relying solely on the diamonds, they were to make an attempt to run the clubs.

Declarer should win the first trick with dummy's ace of spades and should cash the queen of spades to discard the ace of hearts from the South hand.

CASH KING

Now dummy can cash the king, queen and jack of hearts, allowing South to discard the ace, king and queen of clubs.

After all of this flashy discarding, declarer can cash dummy's jack of clubs. Fortunately, the 10 of clubs falls. The rest of dummy's clubs are good, and the slam is home.

If the 10 of clubs had failed to fall, South would have tried the diamonds. It cost nothing to try for the clubs first.

Now wouldn't you be infuriated if you went down at this slam?

First because the diamonds failed to break, and then because you missed the winning line of play.

Today is Saturday, March 30, the 89th day of 1963 with 276 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter. The morning stars are Venus and Saturn. The evening star is Mars.

On this day in history:

In 1870, the 15th Amendment was adopted to the U.S. Constitution—"the right of citizens of the U.S. shall not be denied or bridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

A thought for the day—American novelist Willa Cather said: "Winter lies too long in country towns; hangs on until it is stale and shabby, old and sullen."

Life Honor Award Goes To Teacher

At the annual meeting of the 14th District California Congress of Parents and Teachers Thursday at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, an honorary life membership was awarded to Mrs. Lillian Anderson in absentia because of illness.

The tribute to Mrs. Anderson was given by Mrs. Adele J. Alpers and recorded on tape to be presented to her later.

Mrs. Anderson began her teaching career in Hayward in 1924 in the primary grades. From 1925 until 1928 she taught second grade in San Francisco, then was married and became the mother of two sons. Both boys were graduated from Tamalpais High School. Bob is in the armed services and Stuart is attending San Francisco State College.

From 1948 until 1956 Mrs. Anderson taught second grade at Park School in Mill Valley. Her work as a volunteer at the Cedars, a school for mentally retarded, aroused her interest so that she obtained the necessary preparation and instigated and founded the program for severely mentally retarded children, as a pilot project, at the Alto School in Mill Valley.

In 1962 she operated, under the direction of the county superintendent of schools, the cottage at 70 Lomita Dr., Mill Valley, a school for the mentally retarded.

A reshowing of the "Youth Serves the Future" television program on activities of Bay Area Girl Scouts will be held tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. on Channel 4. The program, one of the "Portrait" series, includes a sequence on the Novato Senior Scout troop.

New Texture Fabrics Make Good Excuse To Buy Coat

There is a wonderful excuse to buy a new spring coat and suit this year. No matter how smart your old coat may be — it does not make news unless it's in one of the exciting textured fabrics and clear pastels that are the hallamrks of new season coats.

THE NEW STYLES propose everything pretty and poetic, everything feminine and delightful to wear.

Thanks to the diversity of styles, spring coats are not confined to any one silhouette. Some are eased, over-flowing, fitted or Plumb-Line. Others are straight from shoulder to hem, with marvelous underpinning in front. Some have cascading back fullness, like a choir boy's surplice. Some swagger into belted trench types. All have a timeless chic.

FABRICS FOR SPRING tell a texture story . . . twists, bubbles, loops, boucles, souffles, nubby, puffed . . . and all are foamy light.

Color wise, coats are captivating. Pastels reign supreme with powder blue and pink taking the spotlight. There's a big salute too for red, white and blue.

FOR THE WOMAN who loves suits (and what woman doesn't) this is an important suit season.

Suits are different looking, more flattering and definitely more wearable for more women than they have been for quite a while.

There's news in jackets — they have a demi-fitted look and move closer to the body. They vary from the waist-skimmer to the baby-doll bolero, to the Chanel inspired cardigan, to the 36-inch length walking suit.

SKIRTS ARE SLIM or softly gathered, easy to stride in.

Costume suits are favorites, especially when the accompanying blouse is a silk print with matching jacket lining.

The colors for the season invite dare-to-be different combinations — such as turquoise and brown, fawn and grey; black and white; or, green and navy. There are whites and off whites while exciting new clear pastels such as yellows, celery tones, corals, pinks, powder blue and citron glow smartly on the scene.

TISSUE-WEIGHT FABRICS, in rough to smooth textures, take the limelight. leading the fashion parade are airy wools; crisp, dry worsteds; wave-patterned silks; cotton rivulets and grainy, new synthetics. Particularly new looking is a light weight Anglo wool in an interesting diagonal weave. For a dressy look the silks and worsteds are leading the spring suit hit parade.

Spring '63 is especially exciting in its mood of fashion flattery. Natural curves are highlighted, colors are appealing and flattering while fabrics whisper wearability.

Relaxed Attitude Urged Toward Art

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Lucienne Bloch Dimitroff urged mothers and guests of the Mill Valley Cooperative Nursery School Thursday afternoon to take a relaxed attitude about their children's art.

Her topic was "Art in the Home" for the dessert-lecture held at the Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley as the school's annual fund raising event. A capacity crowd attended.

The noted Mill Valley artist said, "If children are interested in art or music, it will show up, and all parents can do is provide opportunity, good materials and recognize and encourage talent when they see it.

"I DON'T THINK YOU can force art," she said, "it comes from within."

She spoke of the nursery age as the most exciting, for that is when children are most spontaneous and original. Later they begin to imitate adults, she said, and that too is all right because it's a normal step in development. "It's the way kids grow," she said.

DON'T WORRY, she advised, that school will ruin creativity by letting the kids just fill in forms with colors. Even tracing is O.K.

Mrs. Dimitroff particularly stressed providing the best of materials. In water colors the more expensive have better pigment and don't require the scrubbing in effort, she recommended, and crayons should be "the big fat kind."

THE ARTIST WENT on to discuss how to be encouraging. "Never say, 'what's that?'" she warned, "but—'tell me about it.' Then they can start inventing, and first thing you know you have a poet. Never belittle.

"And I beg you to keep your children's drawings. Your child may do one masterpiece and never repeat himself."

WITH THIS STATEMENT Mrs. Dimitroff led into a discussion of art in the home by suggesting children's art be hung on the walls and changed frequently.

"Then you won't have to get all that modern art," she joked, pointing out that children's art is the primitive in man and possesses the fresh quality sought by modern artists.

THE ARTIST THEN recommended the use of rental galleries as an excellent means of providing art for the home. "It's a wonderful way to find out if you want to own original paintings," she declared, "and one of the best ways to learn to live with a bold or abstract painting."

MRS. DIMITROFF concluded her talk with a discussion and answering of questions on the correct framing of pictures.

MAY 25 is the date selected for their wedding by Andrea McLay of Mill Valley and Dennis Mayfield of Stinson Beach.

Giants Meet Cleveland Tonight Before TV Cameras

SAN DIEGO (AP)—San Francisco's Giants open an exhibition swing through California tonight with a game against Cleveland at San Diego after leaving Arizona fans wondering, "Were those the National League champions?"

The game will be televised on KTVU (channel 2), starting at 7:40 p.m.

For Alvin Dark's pennant winners broke camp at Phoenix after losing 14 of their last 16 exhibition games, the last five in a row, and finishing last in the spring training Cactus League.

FUNDAMENTALS

All was not woe, however, since Dark uses the early weeks for training in fundamentals, trying out rookies and getting his pitching into shape for the campaign which opens this year on April 9 at Houston.

Still the past weeks have pointed up what Dark said when spring training started—the No. 1 problem is finding a capable short inning relief hurler. Southpaw Billy Hoeft, counted on for such duty, suffered a shoulder injury during the first days of training and won't be available until the season is at least a month old.

That confounded the problem and gives a better chance to a couple of younger hurlers—Gaylord Perry who opens against the Indians tonight and rookie Jim Pregenzer, a 27-year-old school teacher who was as surprised as anyone when he survived the final preseason squad cut.

43 INNINGS

Perry, a 6-foot-4 right-hander, worked 43 innings for the Giants last year but the bonus hurler spent most of his time at Tacoma.

Pregenzer spent the season at Springfield with a 14-9 record in the Eastern League and wasn't given too much early attention this spring until the first exhibition game.

Then he came on in the fifth inning against Cleveland after the Indians had scored five times and had two on and two out. He got Walt Bond on an infield grounder to end the inning. In the sixth he struck out the first two batters and got Woodie Held on a grounder to complete his day's work.

GOOD STUFF

Dark continued using the 6-5 right-hander in short inning jobs and he showed good stuff and control. Yesterday he hurled a runless ninth in finishing up a game the Boston Red Sox won 10-7 as the Phoenix finale.

Jack Sanford, already designated the opening day hurler, took the loss as he gave up home runs to Frank Malzone, Roman Mejias and Gary Geirger in the six innings he worked. Geiger collected another off Jim Duffalo as nine of the 10 runs came via homers.

Rookie Jose Cardenal and Willie McCovey homered for the Giants. Cardenal drew two walks and singled twice in his other plate appearances while McCovey added a triple to his production.

5-16 RECORDS

As the Giants completed their Arizona work, their exhibition standing showed 5 victories against 16 losses. They played Cleveland, Boston, Houston, the Chicago Cubs and the Los Angeles Angels, plus one game against their Tacoma farm club — losing that one 10-9.

The five major league foes averaged only a seventh-place finish in 1962, so their potency seems hardly the cause for the Giants' poor record.

After playing tonight and tomorrow in San Diego, the Giants and Indians swing through California with stops on successive days at Santa Barbara, Bakersfield, Fresno, Modesto, Stockton and Sacramento. They complete the exhibitions on April 7 at Salt Lake City.

ALONG MARIN'S SPORTS TRAIL

By JIM GILMARTIN

Terra Linda Girl Discus Star Being Groomed For '64 Olympics

Marin may very well have a performer in the 1964 Olympic Games in Japan, according to Mrs. Roxy Andersen of San Francisco, an expert in women's track and field.

Mrs. Andersen, coach of the Laurel Women's Track Club and a former Olympic hurdler, feels 16-year-old Diane Congdon of Terra Linda can make the grade in the 19 months between now and Olympic time in the discus.

To qualify for the Games a discus heave of at least 160 feet is necessary and Mrs. Anderson says Diane may be able to reach that mark by the summer of '64. We reminded Roxy that only last week Diane threw only 120 feet, 8 inches in the National Women's AAU Indoor Meet in Columbus, Ohio—placing fourth, some 29 feet behind the winner and some 40 feet shy of Olympic qualifications.

"I know," replied Roxy, "but that meet was a great experience for Diane. It proved to her that she can compete with the best of them. It gave her that 'killer competitive spirit' that she lacked in the past.

"She now has confidence and, with the proper training we'll give her in the next year, she should develop into an Olympic competitor. I feel she has the makings to be one of the great discus throwers in the world."

That 120-8 mark last week, by the way, was not Diane's best. In practice she has heaved the platter 136 feet. But practice and head-on competition are two different things. However, with her new-gained confidence Diane could wind up in Japan next year.

SYD RUSSELL, the former prep sports flash for the Examiner, is now publicity director for the Shrine's North-South high school football classic in L.A. Syd was a Marin visitor recently at the Redwood coaches clinic.

J. J. RODRIGO, former Redwood High athlete (Class of '61), was the number one diver on Cal's varsity swim squad this season, placing third in the Big Six championships. He's only a sophomore.

BOTH S.F. ayem papers have been guilty of "jumping" release dates on Giant stories in the past month. Yesterday's story of Garibaldi et al being farmed out was for a p.m. release, but the Chron ignored it and "scooped" everyone in retaliation to a similar "scoop" by the Ex on a Felipe Alou story.

At least that's the way it was told to us by our Phoenix sleuths.

DIVER'S WINNING FORM

Grid Fix Accuser Passes Lie Test

ATLANTA (UPI) — Insurance salesman George P. Burnett, whose report of a telephone conversation he allegedly overheard threatened a Southeastern Conference scandal, took a second lie detector test yesterday and authorities said he answered truthfully.

Burnett insisted again he accidentally overheard Wallace Butts, former coach and athletic director at the University of Georgia, give information about the Georgia football team to Alabama Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant before the 1962 meeting of the two schools.

The Saturday Evening Post published Burnett's story and said the game, which Alabama won, 35-0, was rigged. Both Butts and Bryant have denied any rigging.

Burnett took his first lie detector test before the story broke. He agreed to submit to the second one, administered by Maj. Barney Ragsdale, chief of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, at the request of Georgia Attorney General Eugene Cook.

Following the test, Cook and Ragsdale said Burnett had answered truthfully. Ragsdale, president of the American Academy of Polygraphy Examiners, said Burnett was "completely cooperative."

THE QUESTIONS

Pertinent questions put to Burnett by Ragsdale during the test and his answers, according to Cook, were:

Q. Did you tell me the complete truth during our interview (prior to the test)?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know beforehand that Wally Butts was going to call Bear Bryant?

A. No.

Q. Did you actually hear Wally Butts and Bear Bryant talking on the telephone?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make the notes we discussed while Butts and Bryant were talking on the telephone?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have these notes made up before their telephone conversation?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever pick up any football notes left by Wally Butts in the Foundation Life office (where Burnett works) or any other place?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone assist you in preparing the notations you made?

A. No.

Q. Was Wally Butts' and Bear Bryant's telephone conversation a discussion of SEC rules?

A. No.

Butts, who has filed a 10 million dollar libel suit against the Post, spent 90 minutes in private with Cook yesterday. The former Georgia coach assured the attorney general that "I have never been interested in gambling or associated with people known as gamblers."

Cook said earlier this week he had information Butts had been in contact with known gamblers before the telephone call to Bryant.

EXHIBITION ROUNDUP

Drysdale At Peak

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Durable Don Drysdale, 1962 winner of the Cy Young award, has a great conversation piece to help Los Angeles Dodger Manager Walt Alston make up his mind for an opening day pitcher.

Drysdale, a 25-game winner last season and the National League's strikeout king, went the nine-inning route yesterday in defeating the Kansas City Athletics, 12-1, on six hits.

The big righthander displayed his peak exhibition season power on the mound when he shut out the A's except for a lone run in the third inning. During the 1962 grind, Drysdale compiled a 2.84 earned run average.

Los Angeles ripped the serves of Dave Wickersham and Ed Rakow for 16 hits. Dick Tracewski led the Dodger assault with three singles and a double, while Willie Davis drove in three runs with three hits.

YANKS LOSE

The St. Louis Cardinals handed the New York Yankees their 13th defeat of the Grapefruit League season, 3-2 when Bill White homered off Whitey Ford in the seventh inning to break a 2-2 tie. Righthander Ray Washburn directed the Red Birds to their 11th victory of the training campaign.

Eddie Mathews hit the first homer in the new Municipal Stadium at West Palm Beach, Fla., as the Milwaukee Braves beat the Chicago White Sox, 4-2. Warren Spahn, Hank Fischer and Frank Funk issued seven hits for the Braves. Spahn went 6⅔ innings but retired when a hot smash by Pete Ward bruised the veteran hurler's index finger on his pitching hand.

Rocky Colavito whacked a homer, two singles and drove in three runs to lead the Detroit Tigers to an 8-5, 10-inning win over the New York Mets. The Tigers rattled three runs off Met pitching in the 10th, climaxed by Colavito's sacrifice fly. Terry Fox, who relieved Hank Aguirre in the Seventh, was credited with the triumph.

17 INNINGS

Washington went 17 innings before nipping Minnesota, 3-2, on a throwing error by the Twins' Bernie Allen and a sacrifice fly by the Senators' Marv Breeding. Minnesota slugger Harmon Killebrew was hit on the head by a Tom Cheney pitch, but X-rays proved negative.

Home runs by Johnny Callison and Wes Covington highlighted a five-run rally in the eighth inning that spirited the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-5 decision over the Cincinnati Reds. Clay Dalrymple also homered in the Phils' 12-hit attack on Jim Maloney and Turk Lown.

Jim Gentile's 400-foot homer helped ruin Vern Law's first spring appearance as Baltimore stopped Pittsburgh, 5-2. Milt Pappas pitched shutout ball for five innings to take the victory.

RAIN, RAIN, GO AWAY, SO THE TARS CAN PLAY

College of Marin's scheduled doubleheader with Yuba College today was postponed because of wet grounds, marking the sixth and seventh postponed games in a row for the Tars.

It will be a busy 10 days for head baseball coach Ed Grimm and pitching coach Jim Buckley when the Tars make up their washed out games. College of Marin will play seven games Tuesday through April 11 which will be quite a chore for the hurlers.

Tuesday the Tars will play a practice game with the USF junior varsity at 3 p.m. in San Francisco. Then will come three Golden Valley Conference doubleheaders, starting with Santa Rosa April 6 at noon in Novato.

Then the Tars will take on Yuba April 9 at noon and Shasta April 11 at noon in a pair of make-up home games. Grimm reported today that a place for the two games has yet to be found.

Title Fight Postponed; Champ Sick

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP)—Lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz was taken sick today and was forced to postpone his title defense against Cuba's Doug Vaillant tonight.

The 26-year-old Puerto Rican-born New Yorker had stomach pains this morning and when he started vomiting a doctor was called to treat him. The postponement then was announced.

No date for the fight was immediately set.

Ortiz had been a 3-1 favorite to retain the title in the first championship fight in the world since featherweight king Davey Moore died of injuries suffered in the loss of his crown at Los Angeles March 21.

66 To 1 Shot Wins Grand Nat'l Race

AINTREE, England (AP)—British-owned Ayala won the 122nd running of the Grand National Steeplechase today. Carrickbeg was second and Hawa's Song third.

Ayala, owned by a London hairdresser, started at odds of 66-1. Carrickbeg was 20-1 and Hawa's Song was 28-1 in the gruelling race, on which the first Irish hospital sweepstakes of the season is based.

Ayala won by three-fourths of a length. Carrickbeg was five lengths in front of Hawa's Song.

This was the richest Grand National, and victory brought a purse of $59,682 to owner Pierre Bissone, who styles women's hair under the name of "Raymond."

Second place was worth $7,816 to Carrickbeg, owned by G. Kindersley. Hawa's Song, owned by R. M. Stephenson, earned $3,519.

The winner was ridden by Pat Buckley, who said, "I knew I had it coming into the last fence. It's only the fifth time I have ridden at Aintree. I enjoyed the ride more than the others."

American-owned Team Spirit was officially placed fourth. He was one of three U.S.-owned horses, and ran in the colors of Ron Woodward of Indianapolis and John K. Goodman of Tucson, Ariz.

Carrickbeg, ridden by amateur John Lawrence, his coowner, led over the last of the 30 fences but Ayala and Buckley ran them down in the closing strides of a furious stretch drive.

Irish-owned Out and About had set a tremendous pace for most of the 4½ miles but ran out of steam when the real racing began.

A Preview Of Marin College's Athletic Expansion

Gym Complex Expected To Be Ready Sept., '64

By JIM GILMARTIN

"In my book, we'll have one of the finest junior college physical education and athletic plants in the state."

Harry Pieper, director of athletics at College of Marin, thus described the Kentfield college's million dollar expansion program presently on the architects' blueprints but scheduled for operation by as early as the fall of 1964.

Center of attraction on the new plant will be a magnificent physical education complex featuring a main gymnasium with seating for 1,500 spectators and two outdoor pools. The complex's other features make it a many-splendored thing for physical education people, or as Peiper said, "It's something I've dreamed of all my life."

It will cover 160,000 square feet of filled land.

Eventually the entire athletic plant will be moved from the west to the east side of College Avenue on land that is known as the "Tamalpais Center area." Until flood control projects along San Anselmo Creek are completed, a portion of the expansion program will be delayed.

However, land already is being prepared for the gymnasium complex, eight tennis courts, a baseball diamond and a practice football field and these are expected to be ready for use in September of next year.

When the flood control projects permit, the college then will go ahead by adding a football stadium, more tennis courts, outdoor basketball and badminton courts, several softball diamonds, an archery range, golf instruction area and large parking areas for sports, spectators and students.

The future football stadium will seat approximately 7,000 fans, about the same as the present stands, Pieper said. He added that the light standards at the present stadium will be moved to the new field.

The present athletic field area will become a parking lot when the new plant is completed, according to college plans.

The college, Pieper said, will call for bids on the gym in June and construction should start in July. "Our target date for completion," he added, "is September of 1964."

Pieper cited the architects, Falk and Booth of San Francisco, for a "magnificent job. They followed our recommendations to the letter." The director of athletics added, "Many people are responsible for a fine job of planning—the athletic staff, the administration, board of trustees and a citizens committee."

The expansion program, Pieper said, ". . .will enable us to offer more meaningful kinds of physical education." He explained, "The philosophy of physical education at the junior college level is founded on the belief that high school students have already been exposed to a general variety of P. E. activities. Our program, then, should offer a wide variety of dual and individual recreational activities in a pleasant environment, well-equipped and conducive to the promotion of a lasting interest into adult life. Close individual coaching, encouragement and instruction is our job, and our new plant will enable us to carry it out quite efficiently."

The main gymnasium, with folding bleachers for 1,500 fans on each side, will include a main basketball court, two cross courts, two tennis courts, eight badminton courts and four volleyball courts.

The outside pool area will feature two tanks. The main one will measure 75 x 60 feet for racing, instruction classes and recreation swimming. Its three to five feet depth will permit instructional classes at any portion rather than just at a shallow end.

The other tank will measure 50 x 30 feet with three boards for diving, five, three and one meter high. This pool, 14 feet deep, also will be used for water polo competition, Pieper said.

The pool area also will have bleachers for 350 persons.

On either side of the gym-pool area will be long buildings for a multitude of activities—one side for women, the other for men.

THE WOMEN'S side will contain:

Two class rooms for health education instruction and physical education theory;

Special exercise room, 70 x 45 feet, for dance activities, personal fitness classes and student body activities such as social dances. This room can be divided into two by a folding partition;

Small offices for the women's P. E. instructors and director of athletics;

Locker rooms with all new equipment and stall showers.

OVER ON the men's side will be:

"Combative room," 38 x 40 feet, for wrestling, self defense programs, weight training featuring such fitness aides as bicycles, rowing machines, weight benches etc.;

Four offices for instructors and coaches, complete with dressing and shower facilities;

Gymanstics room, 48 x 40 feet and 21 feet high, featuring a complete line of gymnastics apparatus—rings, parallel bars, trampoline, etc.;

A room where a laundry will be installed when school enrollment warrants such a plant (estimated in 1971);

Equipment room for all inter-collegiate athletic gear;

Another room for drying out athletic uniforms;

Team locker room for competitive squads, in season, with separate showers;

Training room with whirl pools, training tables, first aid equipment, etc.;

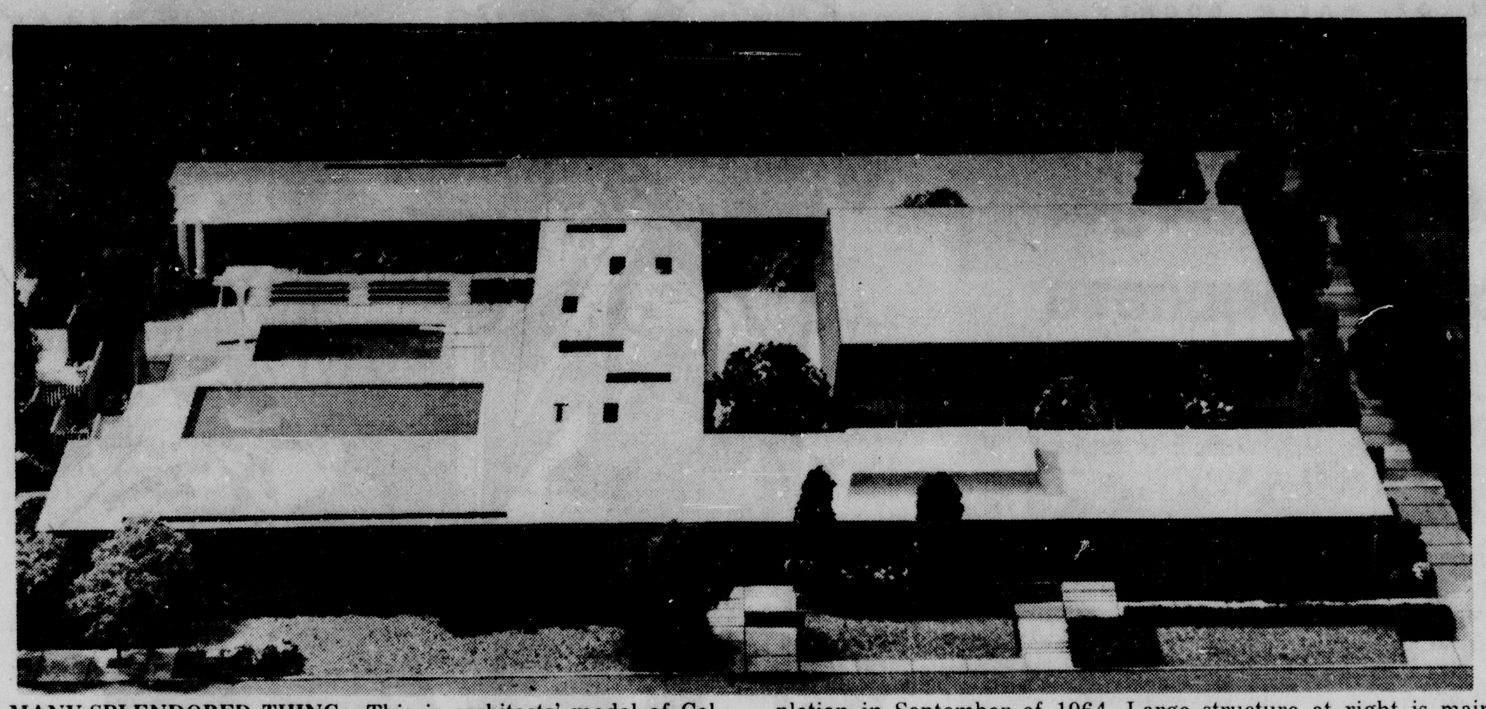

Men's locker room, 96 x 51 feet.

Pieper noted that both the men's and women's locker rooms open out into the pool area and, like the pools, will be available for summer use. "In fact," he pointed out, "the entire project will be something for the community to share."

He also said a snack bar and toilet facilities will be conveniently located.

One ticket office will handle the entire gymnasium complete for spectator sports, Pieper added.

"I'm sure," he concluded, "we'll have one of the finest plants in the state and something of which the entire county will be proud."

AAU SWIMMING

DeVarona Scores 'Breathless' Win

CLEVELAND (AP) — "I didn't breathe for the last five yards," said Donna De Varona after her hairbreadth triumph over Sharon Finneran in the 400-yard individual medley race in the Women's AAU indoor swimming championships.

Donna captured her fourth record victory in the meet last night when she beat Sharon with a time of 4 minutes, 47.3 seconds. That knocked 5.6 seconds off Miss Fenneran's American record set last year.

The rivalry of the 15-year-old Californians was underscored when Donna passed up defense of her 200-yard backstroke crown to swim against Miss Finneran.

"When Sharon takes the lead on the breaststroke, I usually don't catch her," said Santa Clara's star swimmer after recording her 10th national championship, indoors and outdoors.

DIVING CHAMP

Patsy Willard of Phoenix, Ariz., won her second straight one-meter diving title and made it look easy, piling up 415.85 points to 383.55 for the runner-up Barbara McAllister, also of Phoenix.

Ginnie Dunkel, a 16-year-old from West Orange, N.J., cracked the 200-yard backstroke record with a clocking of 2:14.9 — 1.8 seconds under the old mark.

Roby Whipple of Santa Clara, a 16-year-old who finished second a year ago, won the 250-yard backstroke in 3:14.7.

Terri Stickles, 16, who was on Santa Clara's two victorious 400-yard relay teams Thursday night, added the 100-yard freestyle crown to her trophy room. She won it in 55.3 seconds, equaling the meet record.

Three Share Lead In The Azalea Open

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Barber, rising young Canadian star George Knudson and Gene Littler, last year's No. 2 money winner, were the three leaders as the $20,000 Azalea Open Golf Tournament's third round started today.

Their 137 totals for 36 holes, seven under par, gave them a one-shot lead over putting wizard Doug Ford and Larry Beck, a promising young North Carolina professional who was national junior champion six years ago.

This tournament which has produced three playoffs in the last five years, may well have another after tomorrow's final round.

Sharing sixth place at 139 were Harold Kneece and Billy Farrell. In all, 20 players were under par for 36 holes and 11 others even with regulation figures.

Ford's fantastic 31-33—64 was the big story of yesterday's second round. The fast-stepping former Masters champion shaved 10 shots from his first round score as he took 24 putts, seven less than the day before.

He Teaches Youths To Shoot Straight

By RALPH CHATOIAN

It's simple logic: When your father is a gunsmith you are going to be around guns.

And in the case of George H. Finney, 49, he has been around guns for a long time.

Finney, head instructor and coach of the Marin Junior Rifle Club, was born a son of a gunsmith in Boonville, Mendocino County. "I guess it just rubs off," says Finney.

He was raised with guns and has been a hunter all his life. Finney and his family moved to Marin in 1935. In 1954, after coaching his two daughters and son the art of target shooting, he started as a coach and instructor for the Marin Junior Rifle Club.

After nine years with the Marin club and 21 years of teaching youngsters, Finney plans to retire, probably in June. He hopes to be able to spend more time with his family.

Finney, his assistant Gus Scheuermann, and part-time teacher Fritz Pfeffer, put in many hours with the 95 boys and girls now in the club.

FULLTIME JOB

"We put in between 800 and 900 hours a year. It's a full-time job," declared Finney. The club holds its practices in the Marine Reserve building in Santa Venetia.

Finney, who has a knack of coaching youngsters, also is active in Boy Scouts, YMCA and Little League. The youngsters in the Marin Junior Rifle Club, both boys and girls, are 12 through 19.

"Some of my best shots have been girls," he said.

RIFLE INSTRUCTOR — George H. Finney, instructor for the Marin Junior Rifle Club, is surrounded by his many rifles and trophies. (Independent-Journal photo)

Finney will be taking 10 members of the club to Willows, Glenn County, tomorrow for the regionals of the National Gallery Rifle match. The Marin club entries, composing two teams, will compete in both individual and team events.

In 1960 the Marin team took third in the nation and team members consistently bring home individual awards, Finney said.

Other big matches in front of the team are the state match in May which will be held in southern California, and the National Outdoor Regionals scheduled in June. "I won't retire until after these matches," said Finney.

Out of the 95 boys and girls in the club now, Finney said about 20 of them are quite active and do more target-shooting than others. He added that the Marin organization trains about 120 youngsters per year.

TOUGH COMPETITION

The Marin Junior Rifle Club concluded its matches in the Northern California Rifle League last night. And the competition in those matches is just too much for the youngsters.

Out of nine teams, eight are senior squads and one—Marin—is a junior squad.

"We came out last, but it was expected," said Finney. "But the experience was good." In all the target shooting in which the team members participate, .22 caliber rifles are used.

Finney, a house painter, lives in the family home at 97 Florence Avenue, San Anselmo.

Sharp, Treadway, Henry Share Keg Spotlight At Greenbrae

It was a big week at Greenbrae Lanes these past seven days in league competition as three bowlers shot games in the high 270s.

Bob Sharp, a 159 average bowler in the Thursday Two of Each Kind Mixed League, topped all keglers with a 279 line. After rolling nine straight strikes, Sharp hit the pocket in the 10th frame but the four-pin, although moved out of position, failed to fall. Bob picked up the spare and threw another strike for his 279 game.

The fine effort made him eligible for the American Bowling Congress Century Club award, which goes to bowlers who throw 100 or more pins above their average.

Dick Treadway of the 900 Classic League raised his average to an even 200 as he shot the high series of the week, 680, which included a 278 game.

Runner-up in series scores was Ed Henry of the Greenbrae Giants with a 673 set which included a 245 game. Bill Rhodes was the other kegler with a big game, a 278 on his way to a 665 series in the 900 Classic. Phil Dorr of the same league rolled a 657 series.

Even the gals found the pins to their liking at Greenbrae. Leading them was Lu Sharp, Bob's wife, with a 617 (215-209-193) series in the Woodcutters mixed league. Marilyn Epidendio of the Solo Flighters League rolled a 609 series for runner-up spot.

Rubin Carter To Fight Gonzalez On TV Tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — He still looks as fierce as ever with his shaven head, drooping mustache and bulging muscles, but Rubin "Hurricane" Carter does not scare the middleweights any more.

"I think I can take him—and maybe knock him out," said Jose Gonzalez, a 23-year-old Puerto Rican who meets Carter, of Patterson, N.J., in a television 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden tonight. The bout will be telecast nationally by ABC-TV, 7 pm., PST.

The 25-year-old Carter had built up a terrific knockout record and his boasts that he could flatten any of the middleweights caused some of the other 160-pounders to shy away from him.

But no more since his last two fights with Holly Mims and Gemeo Brennan. Carter beat both on decisions but even in victory his chin showed signs of being made of glass. Mims dropped him and Brennan staggered him. Then Joe Louis Adair, a sparmate from Wichita, Kan., dropped him in a gym workout.

Carter, ranked as the No. 4 contender by the WBA, has a 15-2 record, including 11 knockouts. He has won five straight. Gonzalez, unranked, has a 27-7-1 record, including five knockouts.

Marin, Other Jr. Colleges Facing Financial Squeeze

The trustees and the president of College of Marin are concerned about possible future difficulty in meeting the ever-rising costs of operating our college.

Costs, like the grocery bill, are everlastingly going up.

At the same time, an enrollment "explosion" of considerable proportions is foreseen in the years immediately ahead. As the huge crop of "war babies" (that has necessitated such great expansion of our elementary and high schools in the past decade and a half) now ascends to our colleges and junior colleges, the crush will be on here, too.

At the same time, the total of assessed valuation (on which local school taxes are levied) is NOT keeping pace with enrollments.

As enrollment climbs, the amount of assessed value per student declines.

Since the tax rate for ordinary operations is limited by law to 35 cents, the financial squeeze is going to get tighter.

Ours is not the only junior college in the state facing this situation. Many others do, too.

Legislation now pending in Sacramento would provide more state financial assistance to junior colleges which now get less than half what elementary and high schools get.

The only alternative is an electon to vote a higher limit for local tax levies, as most of our elementary and high school districts have done.

Either way, the junior college is going to need more money and we taxpayers are going to foot the bill.

Since higher education is increasingly more necessary as the number of nonskilled jobs declines and the demand for technicians increases, we simply must provide our College of Marin with sufficient funds to do this all-important job.

Bouquets And (No) Brickbats

A BOUQUET to Citizens Federal Savings and Loan Assn. for arranging to display Sir Francis Drake's historic brass plaque at their new Northgate Shopping area offices for 10 days starting next Monday. Everybody who has not seen it—especially school-age children studying California history—ought to take advantage of the opportunity.

A BOUQUET to the city of San Anselmo for its efforts to widen Sir Francis Drake, using the old Northwestern Pacific railroad right-of-way from the Hub to Bolinas Avenue. With the growing congestion along Drake, it becomes increasingly evident that the entire NWP right-of-way through Ross Valley should have been preserved for needed highway expansion when the railroad abandoned service.

BOUQUETS to Mayor McInnis and the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce for their appeal to the State Highway Commission for early attention to the need for freeway expansion through San Rafael. With the plan adopted, it doesn't make sense to delay acquisition of property which cannot be developed or fully utilized when it is known that it will be taken for highway widening.

A BOUQUET to the city planning commission for its suggestions to the San Rafael city council concerning the advisability of acquiring "fringe" property now for future parking lot need. San Rafael's traffic congestion and limited parking in the shopping district are two problems that deserve more attention than they have been receiving in the recent past.

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHT

Salinger May Have Brought End To Use Of 'No Comment' Phrase

By MERRIMAN SMITH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Just when the public was becoming interested, congressional investigations developing steam and editorial pages starting to vibrate, White House press secretary Pierre Salinger had to spoil everything.

Pierre says there is no such animal as "news management," at least, not in President Kennedy's administration. He says the term actually originated during the Eisenhower era at the White House.

Salinger expressed his views recently at a luncheon given in his honor by the women's National Press Club.

AMONG OTHER things, he defended the defense department spokesman who last October 19 said there were no offensive weapons in Cuba. This government actually confirmed the presence of offensive Soviet weapons in Cuba four days earlier. Pierre said the poor spokesman was not lying; he was merely relaying to the public what departmental higher-ups had told him.

Pierre thought it was frightfully naive of one witness before a recent congressional committee to suggest that the Defense Department man would have been better off by answering "no comment."

This suggestion, Pierre said, "shows an abysmal lack of knowledge about Washington reporting where 'no comment' has long been synonymous with 'yes'."

If Pierre is to be taken literally, one of the grand old phrases is about to disappear from the Washington lexicon.

IF SALINGER is right, a freshly curried New Frontiersman might bound out of a government department one night, spot a toothsome filly making her way home and say to the young maid, "how about dropping by my apartment for a spot of sin?"

One needs little or no imagination to think of the complications that could develop should the girl mutter "no comment."

IN SERIOUS defense of Salinger, however, use of "no comment" has become a sort of evasive affirmative in the nation's capital. When Salinger, himself, uses the term at a news conference to fend off a rather specific question, he may mean, "I know but I won't tell." Or he may mean, "Golly, Clyde, the report is true but we're not ready to announce it yet."

If Clyde has any journalistic seasoning, he goes back to his office believing that Salinger was slipping him a sly yes.

Since the president's chief spokesman has pretty well ruined a tried and true device of Washington journalism by blurting it out in public, he should come up with a reasonable facsimile for the insiders.

Among the possibilities might by "I ain't talking" or "Sez who?" Neither of these, of course, is particularly cultural. Fitting the image of culture is Pierre's problem. Meantime, the commoners can have a whale of a time at parties, sneaking off with pretty girls and giggling "no comment" to each other.

THE CYNIC'S CORNER By Interlandi

ONE THING THEY ALL HAVE IN COMMON

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

LITTLE CHILDREN CAUSE BIG DAMAGE

One 7-year-old girl demonstrated an unusual capacity for mischief when she took her two brothers, aged 5 and 2, on a two-week wrecking spree in England.

They were brought into juvenile court on the following charges:

1. Starting a lumberyard fire that destroyed $5,600 worth of property;
2. Setting another fire in a vacant house;
3. Damaging a tractor so badly that it was put out of commission for a week;
4. Burglarizing a workman's hut of money and cigarettes;
5. Breaking into a poultry yard and robbing feathers from chickens and breaking eggs.
6. Slapping a horse's flank, which sent the animal bolting into an automobile.

The trouble children cause cannot only be dangerous but vexing. But it is worth any effort to direct this misused power that God has entrusted to them into worthwhile outlets.

"Let us, then, follow the things that make for peace." (Romans 14:19)

Give parents and teachers, O Jesus, the wisdom and patience they need to give a constructive direction to the power of youth.

Independent-Journal:

Your top news item about the National Seashore Park, I-J, Monday, Mar. 25, leads me to believe that Congressman Don Clausen is getting a "snow job" from the Park Service.

The difficulties of Mr. Cole, project manager, when reduced to their lowest common denominator, spells "We ain't got no money yet."

The loss of his "confidential secretary" is, to be sure, nothing short of tragic. I believe, however, if he will look through his own regional office or ask the Civil Service District office, he will find that a suitable replacement is available. Perhaps not so "confidential" but able to do any work that he may find necessary.

If it is publicity Cole wants, he should also try to get a good P.R. man or woman. He certainly flubbed his first effort in the news article referred to above.

Cole's statement about the shortage of appraisers locally is simply not true. There are at least 12 independent fee appraisers in the county. They are listed in the classified telephone directory. I am an appraiser with over 25 years experience and I know most of the appraisers in northern California. I made a quick check today and of the five appraisers I was able to contact, not one of them had been approached by Cole or anyone from the Park Service. Likewise not one of them had been retained or reserved by any of the land owners.

I would like to make it clear that I am not against the park. The late Clem Miller consulted me about it often before his tragic passing. My position then and now is that the people who are giving up their land for the park should be adequately compensated for it. The government is not only taking the land but they are in many cases putting farmers and dairymen out of business. To take a man's land and pay him the going market price for it does not necessarily compensate him for the going business which in many cases may be worth several thousand dollars per year if he is permitted to keep it.

My views are fairly well known and may be that is the reason I have not been contacted by Cole.

We were all riding in the back seat!"

Grown Up 'Kids' Are Crowding Youngsters Off Elephant Rock

THE ELEPHANT ROCK fishing pier that the county installed in Tiburon was supposed to be for kids.

But the "kids" seem to be getting older and older as the weeks go by. The last time we went by, the place seemed to be crawling with so many grownups that the kids could scarcely stick their heads out between the elbows of the oldsters.

HOSTESSES OR women drivers for buses that now run through San Rafael? It's only a surmise, but from the wondrous ideas that are being cooked up by the owners of the Marin Transit Authority, we wouldn't be surprised if they came out with something like hostesses.

In fact, one of the young executives of the new bus line said he's thinking of an "executive bus" to San Francisco, if plans jell for a Marin-San Francisco commute service.

Wouldn't it be something to be able to catch an "executive bus" in San Rafael and have the morning paper served with your coffee as you ride into San Francisco!

THE SHERIFF'S STAFF has a lot of hidden talent, in addition to their dead-eye pistol team of statewide renown.

Deputy Ed Mauberret has been asked to display some of his paintings at the Royal Art Academy in London. It all came about because Deputy Ed happened to do a portrait of visiting royalty some time back, and they apparently like the job.

And Jetaun Fisher of the identification department is of course well known in drama circles. She's in the musical revue, "This Must Be the Place," at Sabella's. It's so well received that the show may run all summer instead of ending next month as originally scheduled.

KAYO Hallinan had to pay several thousand dollars damages to a Fairfax youth a couple years ago for injuring the youth in the jaw. This week, Kayo's brother, Patrick Butch Hallinan, now a lawyer, tried his first case in Marin—a paternity suit against a young man.

By coincidence, the defendant in the paternity suit turned out to be the same young man who was involved in the fisticuffs with Kayo years ago. Atty. Butch Hallinan put up a good fight in court this week, but he lost the legal battle.

They didn't even bother to send a man down to serve the papers. They figured Sam would serve himself, sign the papers, and appear at the appointed time.

MARIN YOUNG Republicans must have really been split into factions. Even in court last week, the conservatives sat to the right of the aisle, the more liberals to the left, and right smack in the center on the witness stand sat last year's president—a member of the "neutral" faction.

How Can Clay Report Be Lauded By Friend And Foe Of Foreign Aid?

WASHINGTON.—The most constructive and controversial, the most massively misunderstood but still widely supported program of the Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations is foreign aid—military and economic.

Because foreign aid is complex, spread all over the world, and its fruits slow to appear, it is understandable that most people do not know how much is being spent where and why. It is, therefore, all the most significant that popular support for foreign aid, as found in the Gallup surveys, is higher today than at any time in the past nine years.

But now a new factor is being added to the debate over military and development aid. This new factor of uncertain impact is the Clay report—a review, a reappraisal, and a series of recommendations by a commission appointed by the President of 10 experienced private citizens and headed by Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

DID I REFER to the "uncertain impact" of the Clay report? Well . . .

Rep. Otto Passman, (D., La.) chairman of the Foreign Aid Subcommittee on Appropriations, who wants to cut the heart out of the foreign aid program — and always has wanted to — thinks another star ought to be pinned on the General's shoulder.

President Kennedy, whose budget calls for a billion dollar increase in foreign aid spending, says he is "grateful" to Gen. Clay, is "pleased" with the report.

There you are—two public officials with opposite viewpoints (the President and the chief Congressional opponent of foreign aid) praising the Clay report for opposite reasons.

Are Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Passman simply stressing the things which most support their side of the argument? Or is the Clay report so ambivalent that it is all things to all people?

Let's look at the report, not merely at what others say about it.

THE CLAY Committee unanimously supports the principle of military and development aid, calls it "essential."

It describes the foreign aid programs as of "great value" to the national interest and to "national security."

It wants these programs continued substantially.

It cites the fact that the countries most benefited by foreign military and economic assistance—those contiguous to the Communist bloc and most exposed to perils—receive the major portion of U. S. aid and are thereby able to maintain 2 million armed men ready, for the most part, for any emergency. "Better reduce our own defense budget," it says, "than to discontinue the support which makes possible" this contribution to the security of the free world.

The report endorses the competence and approach of the new Aid Administrator, David Bell, former Director of the Budget.

THE CLAY Committee's central criticism is this:

"We believe that we are attempting too much for too many and that a higher quality and reduced quantity of our diffuse aid effort in certain countries could accomplish more."

Thec ommittee wants an assistant program of reduced scope and thereby more concentrated where it will do the most good. It favors terminating aid to countries not ready to use it effectively or failing to do their part in their own development. It warns against aid for international political purposes.

The report says that the present program can accomplish its purposes with a cut of a half-billion phased out over three years and that its discriminating guidelines should permit a trimming of the proposed $1 billion increase in the new budget.

This is sound and sensible. The Clay report is far nearer the President's position than it is to the anti-foreign aid views of Rep. Passman.

SIGNIFICANT CHANGE IN SYSTEM

Prisoners Moving To Camps

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Significant changes in California's prison program are being noted at the present time, and the changes which eventually will have some material effect on the taxpayers, have for the most part been achieved by Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

The new approach to prison care is expected to prove not only a boon to California, but also to be pointed to by penologists as an ideal method of maintaining society's offenders.

It is based on the theory that nothing is so deteriorating to an individual than incarceration with nothing to do.

Under the new approach, an increasingly large percentage of those sentenced to state prison will be sent to camps.

At the camps, they will participate in out-door programs of forest protection and conservation, stream clearance, development of access roads to open up recreational areas, and other projects.

Inmates benefit by learning work habits and being exposed to health, outdoor life. The public benefits by having valuable natural resources conserved and improved and by having more recreational areas developed.

The taxpayer benefits by receiving valuable work efforts, and because it is less costly to maintain prisoners in camps.

Although there is nothing new about prison camps, the new concept involves who and how many can safely be placed in camp programs.

When Governor Brown took office in 1959, less than 4 per cent of the prison population was in camps. The remainder was behind walls, with a large percentage in complete idleness.

The governor felt a substantial percentage of persons sent to prison were nonviolent, non-aggressive persons who would not endanger the public even if some of them did walk off from camp.

Brown also felt another significant percentage were always within a few months of release, and would not be any greater threat to public safety in camp than they would a few months later when they were released—either on parole or expiration of sentence.

Brown decided the greatest good would be to get the greatest number of prisoners into the camp program.

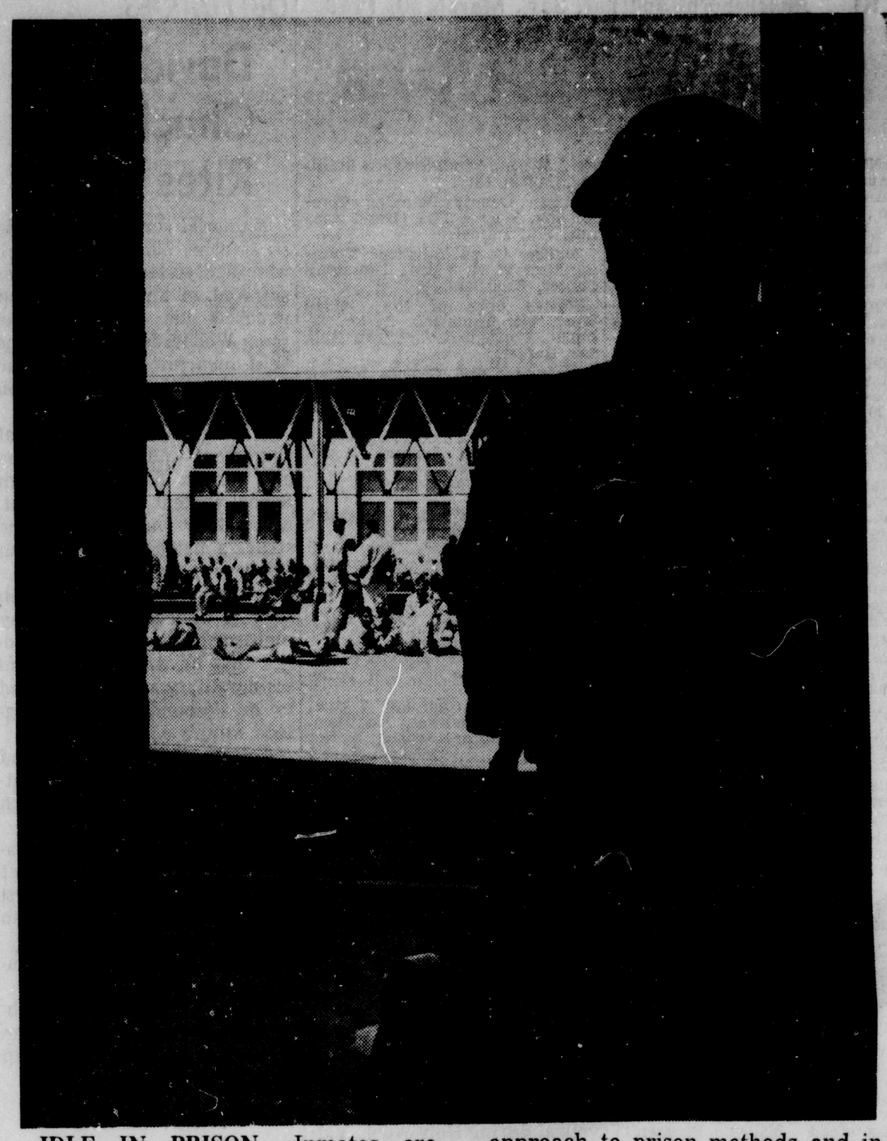

With this objective, he launched the new conservation program. In four years, he has increased the number participating in camp programs to 10 per cent.

Last month, the new state conservation center was opened at Susanville. This is the first of a number of centers which will serve as bases for camp operations.

The percentage of prisoners eventually to be housed in camps varies between 15 per cent estimated by conservative prison officials to the 50 per cent or better that many who have studied prison populations claim are safe risks in open camps.

Whatever the end figure, the public will benefit from reduced costs of prison construction and maintenance. California also will benefit through the conservation and recreational development efforts of the prisoners.

Those who are sociologically minded can take satisfaction in the knowledge that the prison program has taken a more human turn from the days when a prison was only iron bars.

IDLE IN PRISON—Inmates are shown with much time on their hands and very little to do. Under a new approach to prison methods and increasing large percentage of those sentenced to prison will be sent to camps.

COURT FURTHER PROBES SCHOOL PRAYER ISSUE

N.Y. Decision May Affect Two Pending Cases

By CHARLOTTE MOULTON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—"When you prayest, enter into thy closet and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to the Father which is in secret . . ."

Jesus spoke these words in the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 6:6).

Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black referred to them recently during arguments on whether Bible reading and the Lord's Prayer are permissible under the Constitution as opening exercises in public schools.

The passage may have special significance for Americans trying to think their way through this emotion-charged issue. As one lawyer put it, the cases arouse thoughts "about the nature of man and his existence here on earth."

Black wrote the opinion which last term struck down New York's state-composed school prayer.

The First Amendment says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

The states for many years have, through the 14th Amendmen, been subject to the same prohibition.

" 'No' means 'no,' " Justice Tom C. Clark said. "This was all the court decided."

Many legal observers who followed arguments on nowpending Baltimore and Philadelphia area cases insist however, that unless the court backs away from its New York ruling the same reasoning controls the Lord's Prayer and Bible reading cases.

The general contention of state officials is that opening the school day with the Lord's Prayer is part of the national heritage, having outgrown purely religious origins, and merely teaches moral and ethical precepts.

They cay the provision for excusing any child who does not want to take part in the opening exercise is ample protection for those who do not approve of it.

The plaintiffs in the Baltimore case—Mrs. Madalyn E. Murray and her 16-year-old son William, both atheists—challenged a rule requiring reading the Bible and/or recitation of the Lord's Prayer without comment every morning.

A Unitarian couple, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Schempp, filed the Pennsylvania case, contesting a state law which requires that 10 verses of the Bible be read without comment at the opening of each school day.

Mrs. Murray and the Schempps argue that the challenged practices favor the Christian religion over others and certain Christian groups over others.

They say the practices interfere with the guarantee of free exercise of religion, because public action must be taken by the children in order to take advantage of their right not to attend a religious ceremony. At the same time pressure is exerted on them to attend.

The arguments provoked a verbal free-for-all.

The most outstanding development was a spasmodic verbal duel during the entire argument between Justices Black and Potter Stewart.

Stewart said he had never read anything in the First Amendment about "a wall of separation between church and state."

"Why can't a child who doesn't want to participate just walk away?" he inquired.

When it was generally agreed that a few moments of silence would not be unconstitutional, Stewart remarked to Mrs. Murray's attorney:

"Your client could stand there and think about his disbelief."

Black came back with the observation that, while the majority has a right to freedom of religion, that right may not be exercised just anywhere.

Stewart said there was a tendency to lump the two clauses of the First Amendent together when actually they sometimes conflict. If a majority wanted to open the school day with prayer, the practice might be called an "establishment," he said. But stopping it would interfere with the "free exercise" by them on their religion.

He said he was not advancing an answer to the conflict but merely pointing it out.

Stewart also suggested that the Baltimore case might merit a trial to determine the compulsions on a reluctant participant to conform and the results if he does not.

He suggested that allowing the majority to select public school prayers the Constitution's guarantees to a kind of "local option."

Chief Justice Earl E. Warren questioned a state argument that the main issue is between theism (belief in a supreme being) and non-theism.

"Aren't there many groups who believe as fervently in God as anyone else who oppose this?" he inquired.

He mentioned Jewish groups.

The chief justice was also interested in Hawaii, where there are many Buddhists. He posed the imaginary situation of 51 Buddhist children and 49 Christians in class together. The majority would then choose a Buddhist ceremony to open classes and the Christians would walk out? He asked.

(The answer by Maryland Atty Gen. Thomas B. Finan was "yes.")

Justice Arthur J. Goldberg found it hard to follow the state argument that the opening exercise is not "religious."

"Aren't you denigrating the Bible?" he asked. If the Bible is anything, it is the greatest religious document the world has ever had. But you say you are reading it for some other reason."

Good News Hard To Find

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Good news, like the good man in the old song, was hard to find this week.

Davey Moore, featherweight boxing champion for four years, died in Los Angeles of injuries he received when he lost his title by knockout. His death touched off demands in California and other states for a ban on professional boxing.

An explosion in Tucson killed at least six persons and injured more than 20. Four persons died in a hotel fire in Boston.

In London thousands of angry men and women marched to parliament to protest the concentration of unemployment.

Soviet-made MIG jet fighters buzzed a U. S. motorship and fired across its bow and stern.

Khrushchev announced in Moscow he was taking precautions to protect Russian ships in Cuban waters. Two of them have been attacked recently by anti-Castro units.

A "hate America" congress opened outside of Rio de Janeiro after Guanabara state Gov. Carlos Lacerda banned the pro-Castro group from assembling in the city. But there were indications that President Joao Goulart was backing sponsors of the "Congress."

In New York almost 20,000 newspaper employees jubilantly prepared to return to their jobs for the first time since Dec. 7. They were confident that the last holdout union, the photoengravers, would accept a proposal that would end the prolonged strike.

But the mood changed to dismay when the photoengravers noisily rejected a proposal accepted by their union leaders. At week's end these employees were still idle and the city's economy remained disrupted.

Around The World Around The Clock

Washington — The State Department announced that a Polaris-armed submarine will take its position in the Mediterranean for NATO duty around April 1.

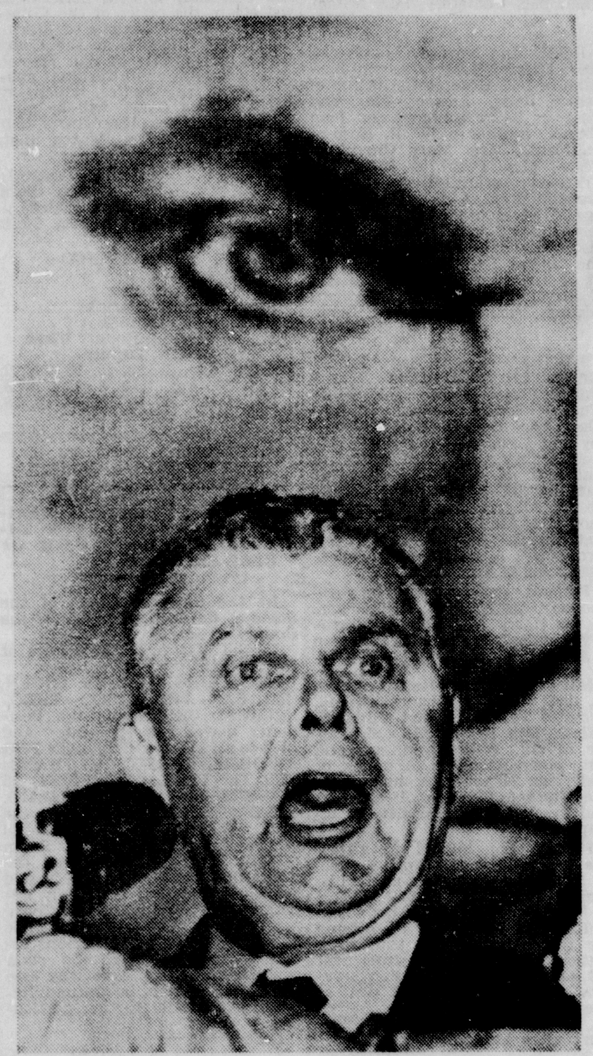

Paris — De Gaulle was troubled all week by strikes aimed at getting higher wages for workers in state-operated industries.

Cape Canaveral — A Saturn missile, prototype of the rocket designed to put men on the moon, was fired successfully.

Washington — The Senate confirmed the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. to be undersecretary of commerce.

No Voter Trend Is Apparent As Canadian Elections Near

By WILLIAM NEVILLE

OTTAWA (UPI) — Following Canadian elections, the losers sometimes wind up leading the winners around by the nose. This sort of history could well repeat itself after the nation chooses its new government a week from Tuesday.

In an election precipitated by a policy feud between Canada and the United States. The principals are:

John Diefenbaker, the prime minister whose Conservative Party was thrown out Feb. 5 on a vote of no-confidence in his policy of not immediately accepting U. S. nuclear warheads for missiles and planes based in Canada.

Lester B. Pearson, Nobel prize winner and former diplomat, head of the Liberal Party and advocate of Canada's promptly living up to what he terms its commitment to gird itself with nuclear arms.

With the campaigns going into their heated final stage, political experts found it difficult to detect any firm trend toward either of the two main parties.

Nor did they see any appreciable loss of support for the minority Social Credit (SOCRED) and New Democratic parties, which together won enough seats in last June's general election to deprive the major parties of a working majority in the House of Commons.

In fact, most observers were freely predicting a SOCRED gain in Quebec Province, where deputy party leader Real Caouette has a strong French Canadian following on his stand against nuclear arms for Canada. This promised to make it even more of a tossup this time between the conservatives, who had 116 seats in the 25th parliament, and the liberals who held 100.

Diefenbaker and Pearson entered the home stretch waging campaigns sharply different in strategy, tone and content.

Diefenbaker, a 67-year-old prairie lawyer who almost singlehandedly ended 22 years of Liberal reign in 1957, has been on the attack from the outset.

His daily speeches to rallies and coffee klatches review his administration's six-year record and outline a five-year plan" for the future.

Diefenbaker prefers the free-swinging campaign speech. In the "give 'em hell" tradition. His audiences have been noisy, mixing laughter with applause.

Pearson, 65, has taken almost a diametrically opposite tack. The critical sections in his speeches are held to a minimum; the accent instead is on his party's program for a parliament."

Speaking with an air of calm confidence Pearson from the outset has talked of the critical problems facing Canada.

The two leaders also have followed different tacks so far as their campaign itineraries are concerned.

Diefenbaker, reared in a farm setting has stuck mainly to the semi-rural areas and avoided the urban atmosphere wherever possible.

Claiming he lost a record 83 seats last June because he "fled over" the voters by aircraft, the Conservative leader has used the train as much as possible this time.

Pearson, on the other hand, has stuck more closely to city or semi-urban areas where his university professor-diplomat background stands him in better stead. Most of his travelling has been by chartered DC6B aircraft at a reported cost of $1,000 a day.

While Pearson has talked of the seriousness of this election, his party organization has tried to enliven the campaign by injecting gimmicks.

The issues of nuclear arms and anti-Americanism have not been hit as hard in this campaign as most observers had expected. One factor here is that the Conservatives, Liberals and SOCREDS are sharply divided among themselves on these questions.

Only the New Democrats and the Communists appear united within their own ranks. Both flatly opposing nuclear weapons in any form.

The Communists, a legal party in this country, will run about 15 candidates across the nation, all apparently doomed to defeat and probably loss of their candidacy deposits of $200 each by failing to draw half as many votes as their winning opponents.

The Conservative and Social Credit ranks are especially divided over whether Canada should acquire nuclear warheads.

While Diefenbaker opposes any such action immediately, several Conservative candidates—including National Party president Egan Chambers and former defense and associate defense ministers Douglas Harkness and Pierre Sevigny—are running under a definite pro-nuclear banner.

The Socreds are in a similar boat, with national leader Robert N. Thompson promising to accept the warheads if necessary and the party's Quebec wing vowing it is against them, period.

The liberal split is not as dramatic. But Pearson's party also has a Quebec wing openly cold to its leader's announced pro-nuclear policy.

Pope John To Issue Holy Week Encyclical

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John XXIII will issue an encyclical during Holy Week, Vatican sources said today.

They said it probably will deal with peace but possibly could concentrate on two other subjects occupying the Pope's attention — Catholic liturgy or ecclesiastical vocations. Holy Week begins April 7 and ends the following Sunday, Easter.

David Chuche Rites Set

Memorial services for David H. Chuche, 19, of San Rafael, who died yesterday of injuries suffered in an explosion that wrecked his Pomona motel room Wednesday night, will be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael.

Lutheran Men Put Words Of Faith On Air

Special Program On Christ's Trial Set Good Friday

Fifty-word "capsules of faith" prepared by Lutheran laymen of Marin County will be heard three times daily over radio KTIM starting next Monday and continuing through April 14.

Sponsored by Lutheran Men of Marin, the messages were written by more than 30 individuals of various accupations. Times on the air will be 8 a.m. and 1 and 5 p.m.

Lutheran Men of Marin will also sponsor a series of evening devotions over KTIM during Holy Week, for the fifth consecutive year. "Journey to Calvary", a dramatic presentation of the trial and death of Jesus, will be presented from 12:30 to 1 p.m. on Good Friday.

From Palm Sunday a series of pastors will speak on KTIM from 6 to 6:15 p.m.

Dates, speakers and subjects will be:

April 7, Bliss Bellinger, Judas—the Christian Who Turned Traitor."

April 8, Harold Johnson, "Caiaphas—the Religion Formalist."

April 9, Delford Kalal, "Peter —the Boaster Cured."

April 10, Gerald Garlid, "Pilate—An Attempt to Quiet Conscience."

Cardinal Bea In U.S. On Speaking Tour

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

One of the great men of the Christian unity movement arrived in the United States this week for a speaking tour.

He's Augustin Cardinal Bea, the 81-year-old German-born Jesuit who heads the Vatican's secretariat for promoting Christian unity.

No Catholic leader of modern times, save Pope John himself, has won the respect and affection of Protestants to a greater degree than Cardinal Bea.

He came to America at the invitation of Richard Cardinal Cushing of Boston, and opened his visit by taking part in a four-day Catholic - Protestant theological colloquium at Harvard University Divinity School this week.

Next week, Cardinal Bea will deliver major addresses in New York, Baltimore and Washington before flying back to Rome.

Playwright Speaker

Elizabeth Berryhill, playwright in residence at the San Francisco Theological Seminary, San Anselmo, will speak on her play, "The Cup of Trembling," at the final session of Lenten meeting at the Episcopal Church of Nativity, Marinwood, at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Baptist Guest Pastor

Chicago Racial Meeting Helped Unity Of Faiths

(Editor's note: Louis Cassels, UPI writer on religion, is ill. during his absence, substitutes for his weekly column "Religion in America" are being written by leading clergymen of various faiths.)

By Rev. John F. Cronin, S.S.
Assistant Director
Social Action Department
National Catholic Welfare Conference

Most of the participants in the National Conference on Religion and Race, held in Chicago last January, called it historic.

It was unique as a massive and joint religious effort to face one of the grave moral problems of our nation. But it may also be remembered for a largely unforeseen by-product, namely, its impact on religious unity and harmony in the United States.

The fact that 700 of the nation's top religious leaders gathered under the same roof for four days was in itself significant. But even more impressive was the manner of their meeting and the results that followed.

There was a unity at the conference that is difficult to describe. Delegates with impressive titles and high prestige in their own church or synagogue circles submerged themselves as workers for a cause.

In a typical work group the presiding officer was a Catholic archbishop. The main paper was delivered by a nationally prominent Jewish rabbi. The chief resource person was a renowned Protestant expert in race relations. Many members of the workgroup never met before. Yet they worked together with the smoothness of a championship football team.

Or we might examine a typical follow-up program. In Kansas City, Mo. a Catholic Interracial Council was formed as a result of the Chicago conference. Its first business was to hear a report of the conference, given by Rev. Kenneth Waterman, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Kansas City. Incidents such as this were duplicated in more than a score of major cities across the nation.

Of course, the Chicago conference did not create the religious good will so evident in our country today. But it does suggest a valuable method for deepening and solidifying interreligious contacts. What is needed is the confronting of some urgent problem of civic morality, on which the religious community can achieve a united front. It should be a problem which is best met by combined effort, not by separate or even co-ordinated action.

Under those circumstances, an interreligious program is natural. And what is natural is usually most successful. The joint desire to achieve results brings about harmony in a way that can rarely be achieved by programs that seem artificial and forced. It is very much like ordinary friendships. These are usually formed by persons who work together in something that offers a real challenge. They rarely result from charm clubs or lonely-hearts associations.

These points are made with no intention to downgrade the value or need for direct dialogue on religious differences. Such discussions have proved their value in Europe, and are beginning to flourish in the United States. But, rightly or wrongly, the average churchgoer is somewhat timid about initiating or participating in ecumenical meetings. But he often is eager to bring the impact of his beliefs into some of the critical problems that affect his family and community.

For example, many parents may have an uneasy feeling that they are not offering proper standards of guidance and control for adolescent youngsters. Yet they face the terrible pressure toward conformity—how can they be different from other parents in the community?

One answer is to find out what other parents really think. Often they may find unsuspected allies, not only in their own church, but in other religious groups. It could well be possible to use this very trend toward conformity, by making the general standard one of wholesome guidance and restraint.

Race relations is but one of the vital moral problems that affect the American family today. Do our youth and our country need a Domestic Service Corps or its equivalent? Are we encouraging wholesome standards in films, television, and reading? What can religious groups do jointly to combat the rising trends toward youthful delinquency? Can our major faiths work more closely together for peace and world unity?

There are more than enough challenges to the religious conscience of America. Many times we are weak in meeting these issues because we fail to work together or, even worse, find ourselves at cross purposes because of misunderstanding and suspicion.

Needed interreligious action in areas of family and civic morality can bring about a great change in our religious climate. It would not, by itself, remove all aloofness and differences. But it would add immeasurably to the moral strength of our nation. And it would leave a lasting heritage of religious harmony.

Marin Jews Mark Passover April 8

SEDER RITUAL—Connie and Charles Raznikov listen to Rabbi David B. Coren of Congregation Kol Shofar read from the Hagaddah while standing at the table set with ritual foods of Passover. On the silver plate in foreground are an egg and a shank bone, representing early temple foods; greens, representing spring; bitter herbs, standing for the bitter life in Egypt, and chopped apple and nuts, representing mortar used in the Pharaoh's buildings. Behind the plate is the Matzoh, unlevened bread which represents the haste of the Exodus. (Independent-Journal photo)

Seder Feast Recalls Ancient Traditions

Passover, the Jewish festival commemorating an event which took place 3,374 years ago, will be celebrated by Jews around the world with services beginning at sundown April 8.

"The festival commemorates the great Biblical epic of the Exodus of the people of Israel from Egyptian slavery to freedom under the leadership of Moses," said Rabbi Morton Hoffman of Congregation Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Road, Santa Venetia.

It is primarily a family observance with the ritual of Seder celebrated in the home. However, both Rodef Sholom and the conservative congregation, Kol Shofar, which meets at the Marin Jewish Community Center, Mission and Forbes avenues, San Rafael, will have community Seder services April 9.

Seder is a festival dinner with symbolic foods. Rabbi David B. Coren of Kol Shofar said there are three main foods. Matzoh, the unlevened bread, is a reminder of the haste with which the Jewish people left Egypt.

Pesach, a roasted bone, is a reminder of the Paschal lamb that the Jews ate in the days of the temple. Marror, bitter herbs, are a reminder of the bitter life led in Egypt.

In addition, there are greens as a reminder of spring. They are dipped in salt water as a reminder of the tears shed in suffering. There is also a mixture of chopped apples and nuts to recall the mortar used in mixing of bricks for the Pharaoh. An egg is another temple food.

Rabbi Coren, said the liberation 3,274 years ago, is the first recorded emancipation in history.

At the festival dinner, the youngest child in the family asks four questions regarding the ritual and the father answers by reciting the Hagaddah, telling the story of Exodus.

"It is curious that the name of Moses, the great leader, is not mentioned even once in the Hagaddah," Rabbi Coren said.

"Passover summons us to freedom," he said. "It calls us to put an end to slavery. It may well be the most meaningful of all Jewish festivals for the contemporary Jew."

Passover continues until the evening of April 16.

The community Seder will be at 6:30 p.m. April 9 at Rodef Sholom at 7:30 p.m.

Rodef Sholom will have special services at 8 p.m. April 12 with a talk on interracial relations and at 8 p.m. April 14 with a Yizkor Memorial service.

Passover has special significance for Christians. It was during Passover, that Christ was crucified.

The Passover meal was the Last Supper and is the foundation of Communion service.

Rev. John D. Riley, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, San Rafael, explained that the Communion services also stands for an emancipation. It is the "passover" from man's wordly and material needs to the spirit and spiritual liberation.

NEW CHURCH OPENS WITH BIG RECORD

The largest class in the 70 year history of the church and the first in the new church building, was confirmed Tuesday at Our Lady of Loretto Catholic Church in Novato.

The Most Rev. Merlin J. Guilfoyle, auxiliary bishop of San Francisco, administered the sacrament of confirmation to 198 persons. There were 157 school children and 41 adults in the class.

This is the first official use of the new church on Novato Boulevard and Grant Avenue. The first Mass in the new church will be held on April 7.

WABAG, New Guinea — Lutheran Mission, Missouri Synod, working here in an area where ancestral spirits are worshipped and stone tools are still used, reports that baptized membership grew from 12,000 to more than 15,000 in 1962, with 157 men now serving as evangelists and teachers in the area.

Christian Prompted Jewish Foundations

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Forty years ago, Dr. Edward Chauncey Baldwin was professor of Biblical literature at the University of Illinois. He was a devout Christian.

Many of his students were Jewish, and Dr. Baldwin was appalled to discover they knew very little about the Bible — the book which grew out of the history of their own people.

Dr. Baldwin voiced his concern to Benjamin Frankel, a 23-year-old rabbinical student. Frankel agreed something ought to be done about it. With the Christian professor's help and encouragement, the young rabbinical student established a campus spiritual center for Jewish students. He named it in honor of a great Jewish sage, Hillel, who lived about 2,000 years ago.

Frankel died four years later, at the age of 27. But he had lived long enough to sell his idea to B'nai B'rith, the Jewish service organization. B'nai B'rith undertook the establishment of Hillel Foundations at colleges and universities all over the country.

Today there are Hillel Foundations on 244 campuses in every section of the United States, and similar ones in Europe, Israel, South Africa, Canada and Australia. They are served by the largest staff of rabbis of any Jewish institution in the world.

The movement instigated by a Christian professor is still growing, according to Dr. William Haber, national chairman of the Hillel Foundations.

"In our formative years," he said, "we had to overcome the apathy of students. It was a period when youngsters were runaways from their Jewish heritage, answering 'none' to the question of religious affiliation on their college admissions cards.

"The academic climate today favors religious identification among students. Jewish youngsters, though still sadly informed about their Judaic heritage, are no longer runaways. We now have on file almost 200 applications for Hillel units at colleges where we are not yet based."

The Marines In Marin

Leatherneck Unit Keeps Fighting Fit

For one group of nearly 150 Marin men, the weekend sometimes means harder work instead of relaxation.

They are the members of M Company, Third Battalion, 23rd Marines, Fourth Marine Division — Marin's "Leatherneck" reservists.

On one Saturday and Sunday of each month they report to their new training facilities in Santa Venetia for two full days of strenuous drilling and training to keep in fighting trim.

In addition, each summer they put in a 15-day tour of active duty at one of four Marine training centers in California.

THERE'S VERY little griping, however, among the Marine reservists. For they can look back at their unit's beginnings—only a little more than 30 years ago—and take great pride in the strides their company has made.

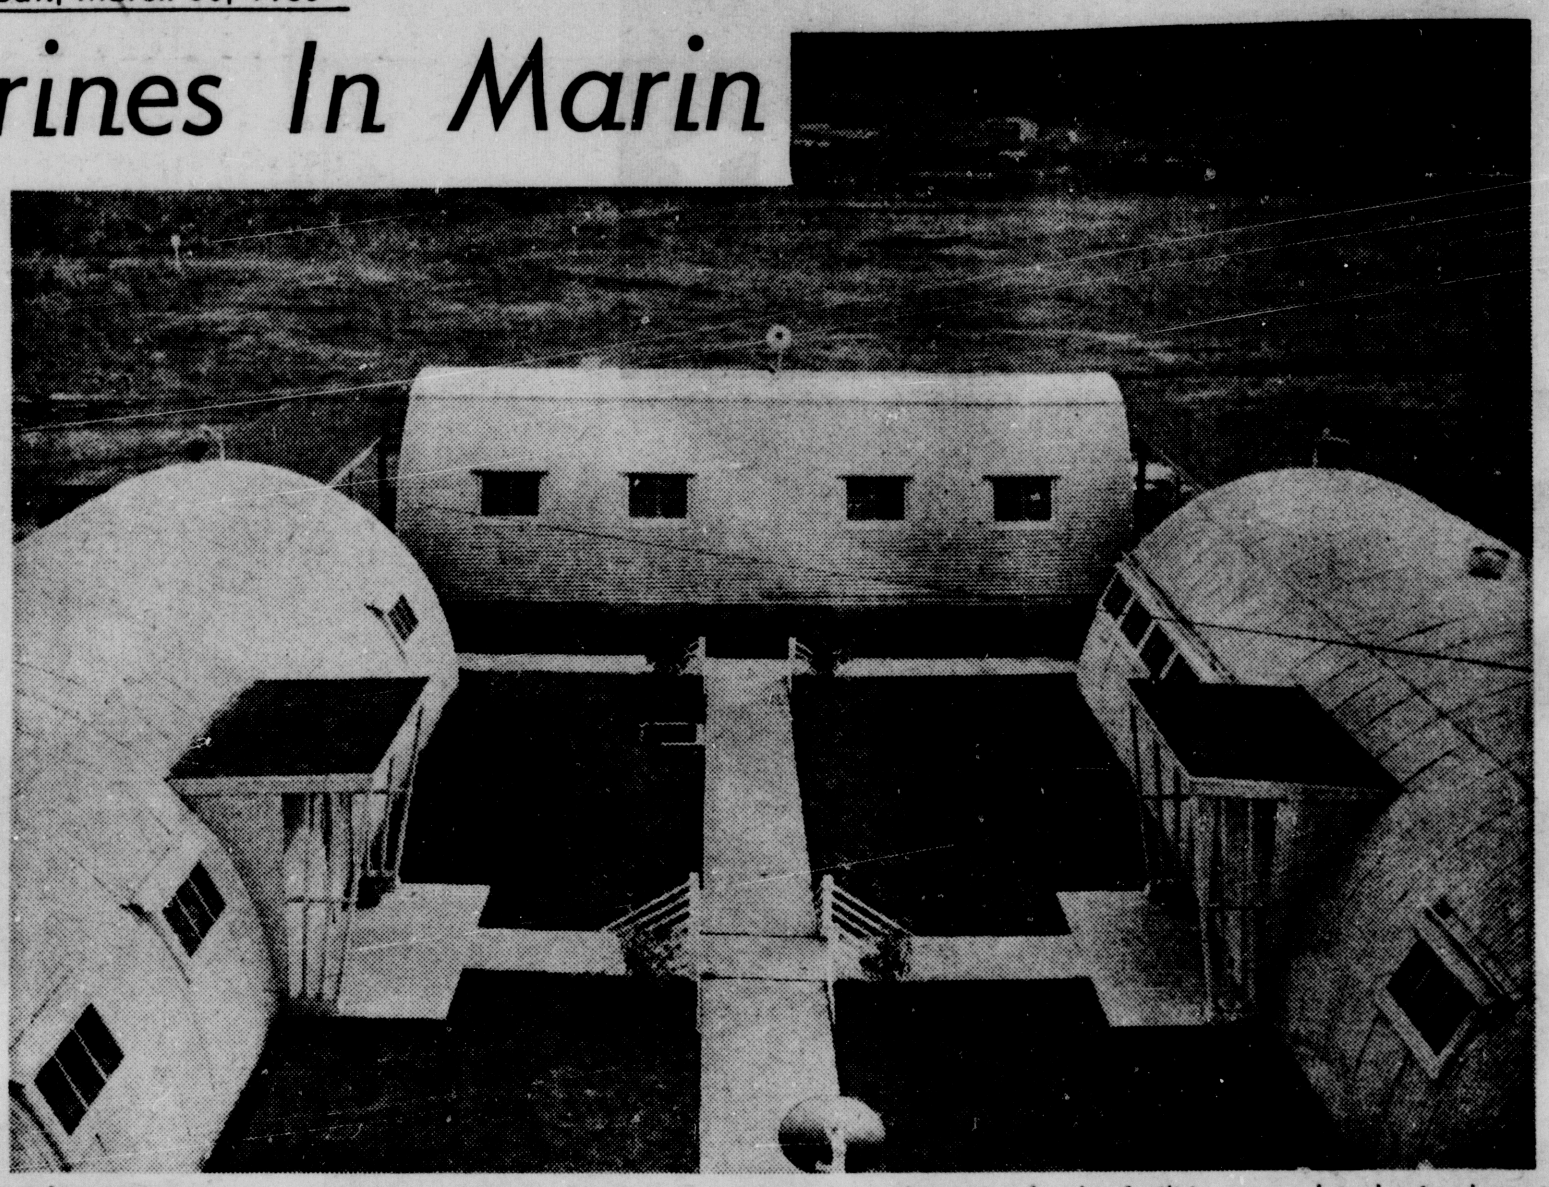

Several reorganizations and changes in the designation of the unit tell only partially the story of its progress.

It was in the depression year of 1932 as B Company of the 12th Infantry Battalion, U.S. Marine Corps Reserves, that the unit was founded in San Rafael by a group of volunteers.

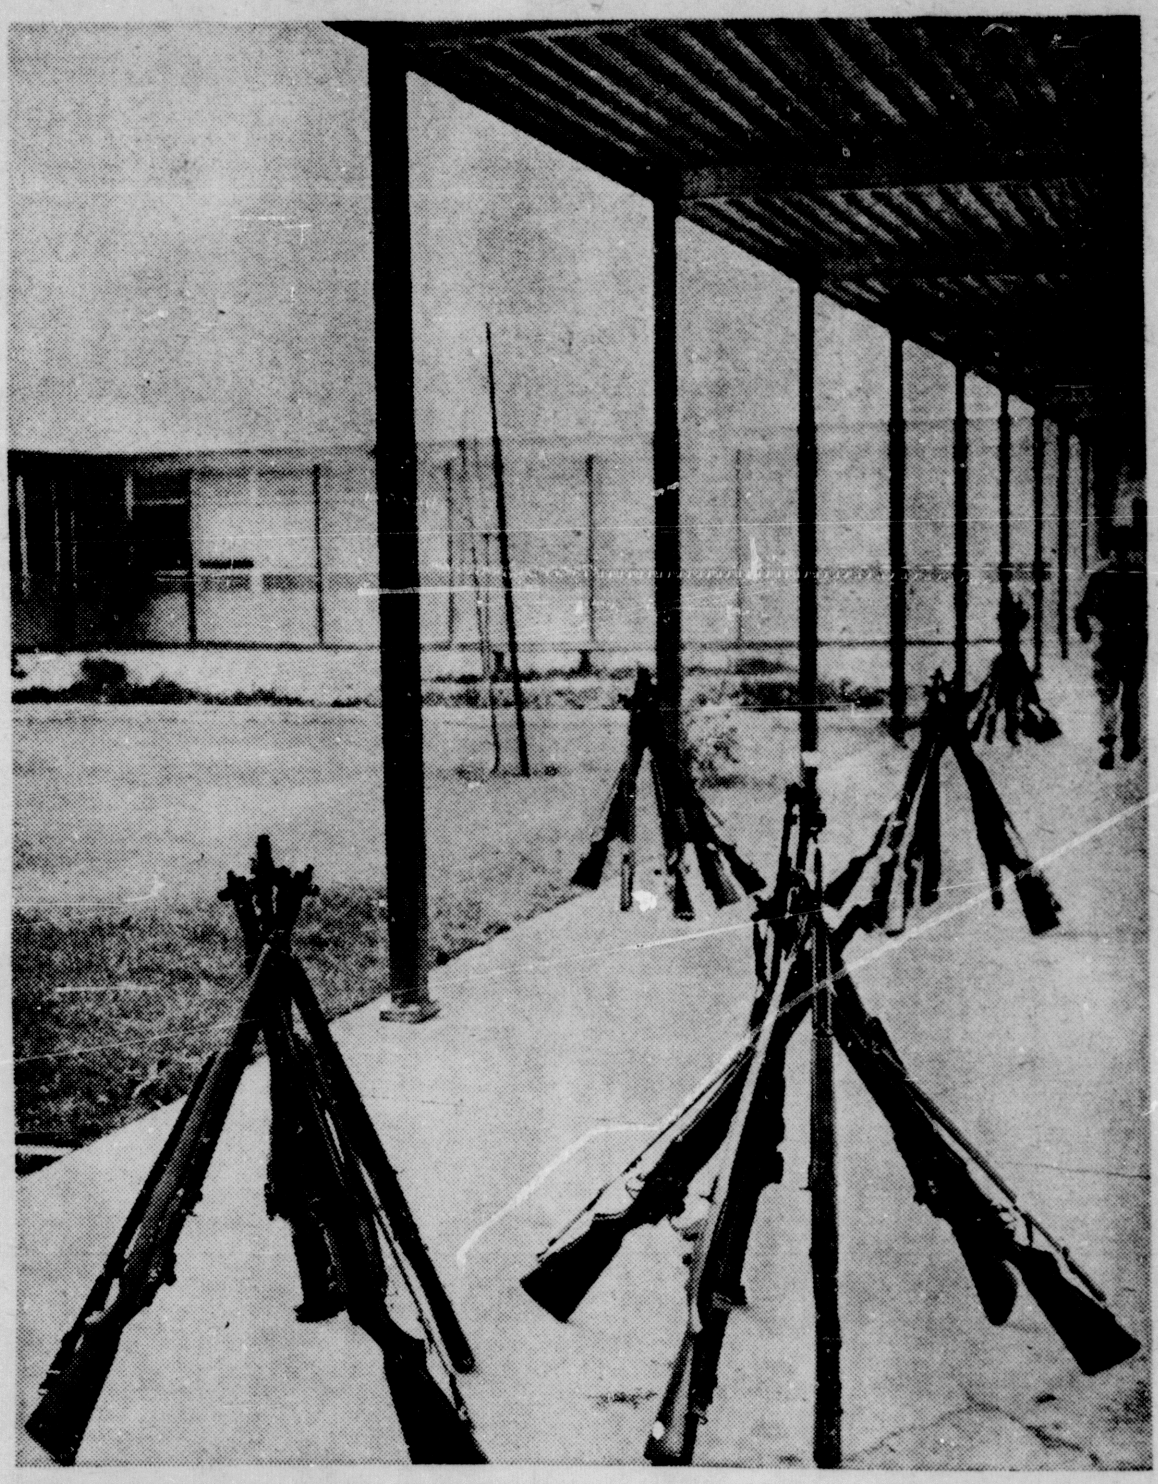

Meetings were held in the San Rafael Bathhouse, then located at the corner of Lincoln and Second. And the rent for use of the building was paid by the reservists themselves.

The reservists received no pay for the meetings they attended. Their only remunera-

THIS PROPERTY in Kentfield, leased from the College of Marin, became the "home" of marin's Marine reservists, then the 14th Rifle Company, following the conclusion of the Korean conflict. Although there were five buildings in all on the grounds, the facilities proved to be inadequate for the very active and growing reserve unit's needs. Consequently, plans were launched for a new armory and other facilities to be built in Santa Venetia.

THE MARINE reserves, now officially M Company, Third Battalion, 23rd Marines, Fourth Marine Division, have been in their new training facilities at Santa Venetia since 1961. There in a spacious 20,000-square-foot of floor space building sitting on a three-acre site, they have an ideal spot for their efforts to maintain the unit in an ever-ready state of preparedness.

THE PRIDE and respect which the reservist holds for his unit and for his country is symbolized by the Marine Corps color guard. The guard is composed of men from the higher ranks of Marin's M Company. It participates in parades and other community activities where it represents the traditions for which the Marine Corps has become renowned around the world. The smart Marine dress uniforms always add an impressive note to any pageantry.

THE MARINES ARE LANDING as reservists storm ashore as part of exercises in amphibious landing techniques during a summer tour of active duty at Camp Pendleton in Southern California. The 15 days spent each summer at one of four training camps in California permit Marin's M Company men—and other reservists—to keep abreast of the latest military developments. Such maneuvers help the "Leatherneck" reservists to merit their title of America's "Minute Men."

THERE'S NO PLACE in a Marine Corps training program for the out-of-condition. Here Pfc. Kent Rossi of Larkspur leads the way for other M Company reservists at summer camp by crossing a river with the help of a rope-line bridge. It's a difficult feat of balance and coordination, but less dangerous than trying to ford a swift and treacherous stream. Such rope bridges are used frequently in Marine training programs.

Our Marines Earn Title Of 'Minute Men'

tion was for time actually spent on active duty in summer camp at Mare Island Naval Shipyard in Vallejo. The men were issued only a single winter service uniform apiece —minus shoes. And only during summer training were they issued actual rifles.

IN FACT, equipment was so scarce that training had to be extremely limited.

Since those rather unpromising beginnings, the unit has undergone many changes. Twice it has been activated to serve Uncle Sam in strife—for World War II and for the Korean conflict.

Several times it has been reorganized. Following World War II it became C Company of the same 12th Battalion, meeting for a time in the San Anselmo City Hall and later in the American Legion Log Cabin in the Hub City.

Following deactivation after the Korean affair, the unit was reformed into the 14th Rifle Company.

Then for a time the unit had its own "home" in buildings and on grounds at Kentfield that were leased from the College of Marin. The five buildings there, however, proved inadequate and plans were launched for a bigger and better training facility.

IN 1961 THIS project was completed and the 14th Rifle Company moved into a new $650,000 armory at Santa Venetia with the National Guard as its neighbor.

The new center, owned jointly by Naval Reserve and National Guard, provides the reservists with more than 20,000 square feet of floor space for classes and training, and sits on a three-acre site. The armory, a rifle range, photography lab, offices, classrooms are only some of the facilities it provides.

There the Marin Marine unit has undergone still another reorganization and change in name to its present M Company titie.

At average strength it consists of seven officers and 135 enlisted men with Capt. Bruce Flanagan of San Rafael in command and Capt. Clark Henry in charge of the inspector and instruction division responsible for administrative matters, recruiting and assisting in the unit's training.

M COMPANY represents a wide range of occupations—policemen, firemen, bank teller, welder, teacher, mechanics, a swimming pool builder, etc. Ages range from 17 to about 23 or 24, with most of the men being married.

All have behind them six months of active duty. Several have had longer stints of active service before going on reserve status.

It is, they all agree, a far cry from the old days when Marin's Marine reservists were forced to pay their own rent for inadequate quarters, drill without rifles and buy their own shoes. Today the Marine reserve learns and trains in the finest facilities with modern equipment under expert guidance—and for substantial pay.

SIGHTING HIS Browning automatic rifle, capable of firing 500 rounds of ammunition per minute, is Pfc. Edward Marshall of Kentfield, a judo instructor and volunteer fireman in civilian life. Through his knowledge of this deadly automatic weapon, Marshall becomes a key cog in the fighting machine that is Marin's M Company Marines.

THE CHOW LINE is always of prime importance to the American fighting man, regular or reservist. In the field or at their home "garrison," the men of M Company enjoy wholesome, hearty and tasty meals.

DIRECTIONS DURING unit maneuvers come from 1st Lt. Harold Fay of Berkeley to Cpl. W. P. Ciocci of San Rafael, left, and Cpl. J. L. Farnsworth, also of San Rafael. Such practical application of real military situations and problems assist reserve unit leaders in developing accuracy and speed of judgment that will stand them in good stead if and when they are called upon to serve in actual combat. STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

If you have been thinking of purchasing an Ampex Tape Recorder to add to your stereo hi-fi system, then this is Bargain time. But first, let me explain some of the outstanding features of the new Ampex Fine Line 1200 series stereo tape recorders.

The 1200 series use THREE SEPARATE, PROFESSIONALIZED HEADS —erase, record, playback— no dual purpose heads, no compromise—each head designed for maximum performance.

FINE LINE ALIGNMENT— special design of frame and parts that move and guide the tape—holds tape in an ultra-precise position on the heads—necessary for 4 track recording and playing.

CROSS-TALK ELIMINATED—results from Fine Line Alignment plus innovations in head shielding between channels—no signal leak from adjacent tracks.

The unit has provisions for Sound-On-Sound recording, and provisions for monitoring, that is listening to the tape while actually recording, and provisions for automatic shut-off at the end of the tape.

For the hi-fi enthusiast and serious recordist, it is both a source of professional quality sound and a means of recording professional quality sound. At the same speed, for example 7½ ips, the Fine Line 1200 has the same frequency response and low noise rating as Ampex professional broadcast recorders.

Now about the bargain. When you purchase either an Ampex 1260 or Ampex 1250 Stereo-Mono recorder/Player, you will receive free of charge your choice of $50 worth of 4-track Recorded Stereo Tape, pick from over 150 selections, and 12 Reels of Premium Ampex Tape with Signature Binding, each reel a long play 1800 foot reel. When you take advantage of this limited offer, you are ahead $116.

Visit our Stereo Sound Room for a complete demonstration of the Ampex 1200 series recorder. While here, ask for a free copy of "HOW TO TAPE IT IN STEREO".

If you own a stereo muliplex FM tuner, you can build a stereo tape library of your own by recording your favorite material directly from FM Stereo broadcasts. Tape it in Stereo for years of lasting enjoyment.

Bringing The Greats Of Music To Marin

Bringing the great artists of concert, opera, ballet and symphonic music to Marin County during the summer months is a difficult and complicated task. But it is a responsibility which the members of the Artistic Council of the Marin Music Chest accept willingly, and meet successfully.

It is also a task which is growing increasingly difficult each year.

More and more artists are traveling abroad during the summers and thus are unavailable. Others prefer to stay home and rest in preparation for their coming appearances with the Metropolitan, Chicago and San Francisco opera companies.

And still another problem of the Artistic Council: The soaring fees for artists.

THE IDEAL way to set up a concert series, the council members agree, would be to announce the entire Marin Music Chest summer series at the beginning of the annual subscription drive (the 1963 campaign opens tomorrow). But this, they add, is an impossibility. Why?

Because an artist changes his or her plans literally overnight. A definite verbal commitment can be erased if the performer has a change of mind. And the Music Chest Artistic Council must begin again a search for a replacement.

This occu - frequently, they say, and until the artist signs "on the dotted line," the council can never be quite certain of an appearance.

On the other hand, a signed contract is seldom broken.

VETERAN MUSIC Chest officials can recall but one such occasion. A few years ago Elizabeth Schwartzkopf signed a contract for a Music Chest appearance. Arrangements were completed, publicity went out. Then came the bad word. The singer's doctor had refused her permission to appear here because of ill health.

Time was short, but the Artistic Council was up to the challenge and came up with a replacement.

Those who subscribe for the Marin Music Chest Summer Concert Series thus do so on faith—without knowing the names of the artists they will hear. But they do know that the Artistic Council has been consistently successful in the past in bringing some of the greatest performers to Forest Meadows on the Dominican College campus in San Rafael for outdoor concerts.

How are these artists selected and lured to Marin for the summer concert series?

Well, admit the Artistic Council members, they start off with one big advantage—the hard-earned prestige of the Marin series.

"OUR SERIES is considered one of the most important musical events on the West Coast, along with the Hollywood Bowl Summer Series," they say.

The council begins its inquiries as to available artists in January. Invariably the advice comes back: Wait and see who will be appearing at the Hollywood Bowl.

There is good reasoning behind this. If the Marin Music Chest were to bring an artist out from New York or over from Europe for a single appearance, naturally the fee would be much higher than if that artist were already on the West Coast.

So the Marin group works closely with the Hollywood Bowl program, often using the same artists following their Hollywood appearances.

NOT ALL Marin Music Chest artists, however, also appear at the Bowl. Many are brought directly to Forest Meadows from the East or Europe. For instance, two seasons ago, Jose Iturbi came to Marin straight from Spain.

When the list of artists available for the summer is complete, the Music Chest president, now Mrs. Samuel Archibald, calls a meeting of her Artistic Council. The list is discussed and the council makes its selection.

This does not, however, always mean that the artists chosen at this time will be the ones who will appear in Forest Meadows.

Once again contact is made with the leading concert man-

"CAN MY IMITATION LEATHER JACKET BE DRYCLEANED?"

Unfortunately, it cannot. Neither can it be wet cleaned. A wet sponging of the imitation leather surface might remove most of the soil. However, if the cotton knit fabric to which the foam lining is laminated becomes wet, it will shrink. Water also may cause the foam to separate from the cotton knit fabric. Even if the foam does not separate from the lining, the shrinkage of the lining will cause the imitation leather jacket to pucker and there is no way the lining can be returned to its original size.

In dry cleaning, an imitation leather jacket will become stiff and unwearable. Therefore, dry cleaning is impossible, too.

While imitation leather jackets are soft and pliable when new, they do present a problem when it comes time to clean them. Again, we suggest that you take your jacket to a professional. He will know how to treat it for the best and most satisfactory results.

agers who book Hollywood Bowl—Sol Hurok, Alexander Haas, Columbia Artists Management Inc., et al—and they are given the names selected by the Artistic Council. Negotiations then begin in earnest.

DATES AND fees are confirmed and arrangements are made for contracts to be mailed immediately, always with the hope that the selected artists will be available.

Among the highest paid artists who have appeared under Music Chest auspices over a period of years have been Iturbi, Isaac Stern, Yehudi Menuhin, Jan Peerce, Artur Rubenstein, Richard Tucker, Helen Traubel, Gregor Piatigorski, Alexander Brailowsky and the San Francisco Ballet.

Of the ballet, Music Chest officials note that it will be impossible to present that company again at its present cost unless subscription drive proceeds climb to a substantially higher level than they have been in the past.

Under consideration for the 1963 season is a joint recital of Jose and Amparo Iturbi, since the former is making several appearances this summer in the Hollywood Bowl.

Again, however, realization of those plans are dependent upon the success of the 1963 subscription drive.

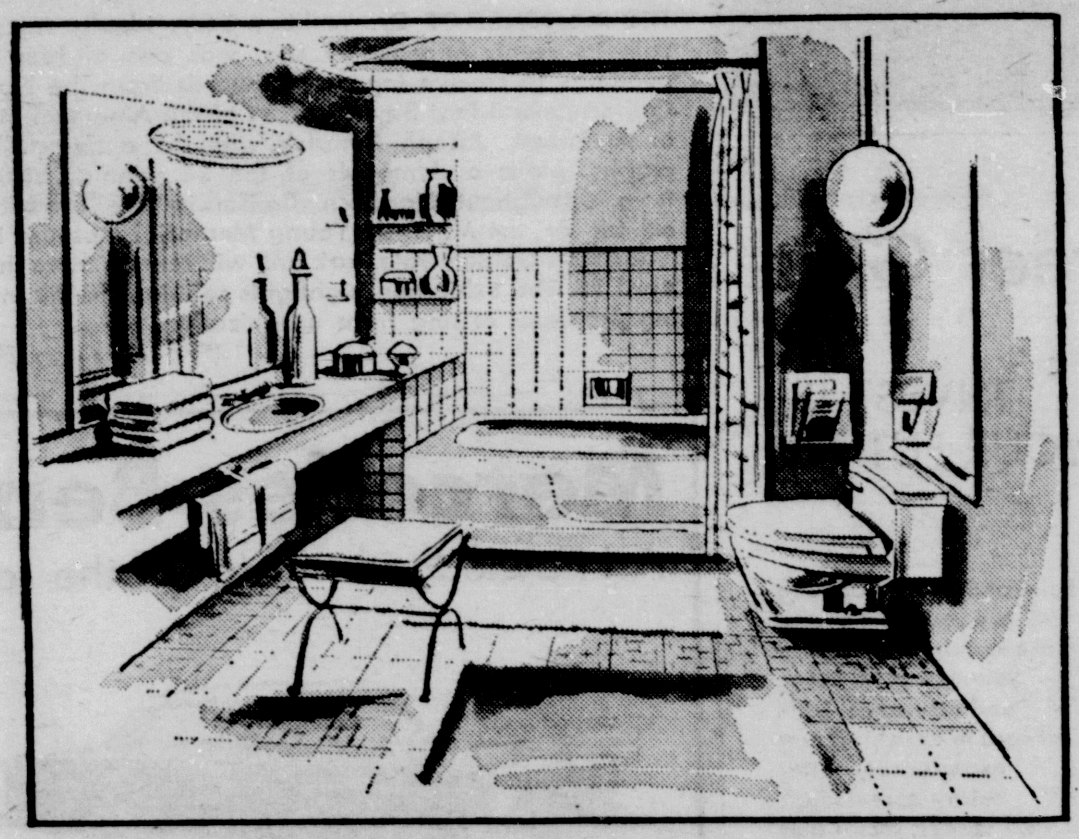

THE DRIVE will continue through the month of April with county headquarters located at Hoy's TV and Music Store, San Rafael. A subscription of $5 receives two tickets to every concert in the 1963 summer series, mailed in advance; a $10 subscription, four tickets; $20, eight tickets.

Subscriptions of less than $5 entitle the subscriber to a card which when presented at the gates of Forest Meadows on the dates of the concerts, admit the holder with the payment of 50 cents admission per concert.

Two Marin residences, an apartment building and a professional office center were among the merit winners in the Bay Region Honors Award Program of the Northern California and East Bay Chapters of the American Institute of Architects.

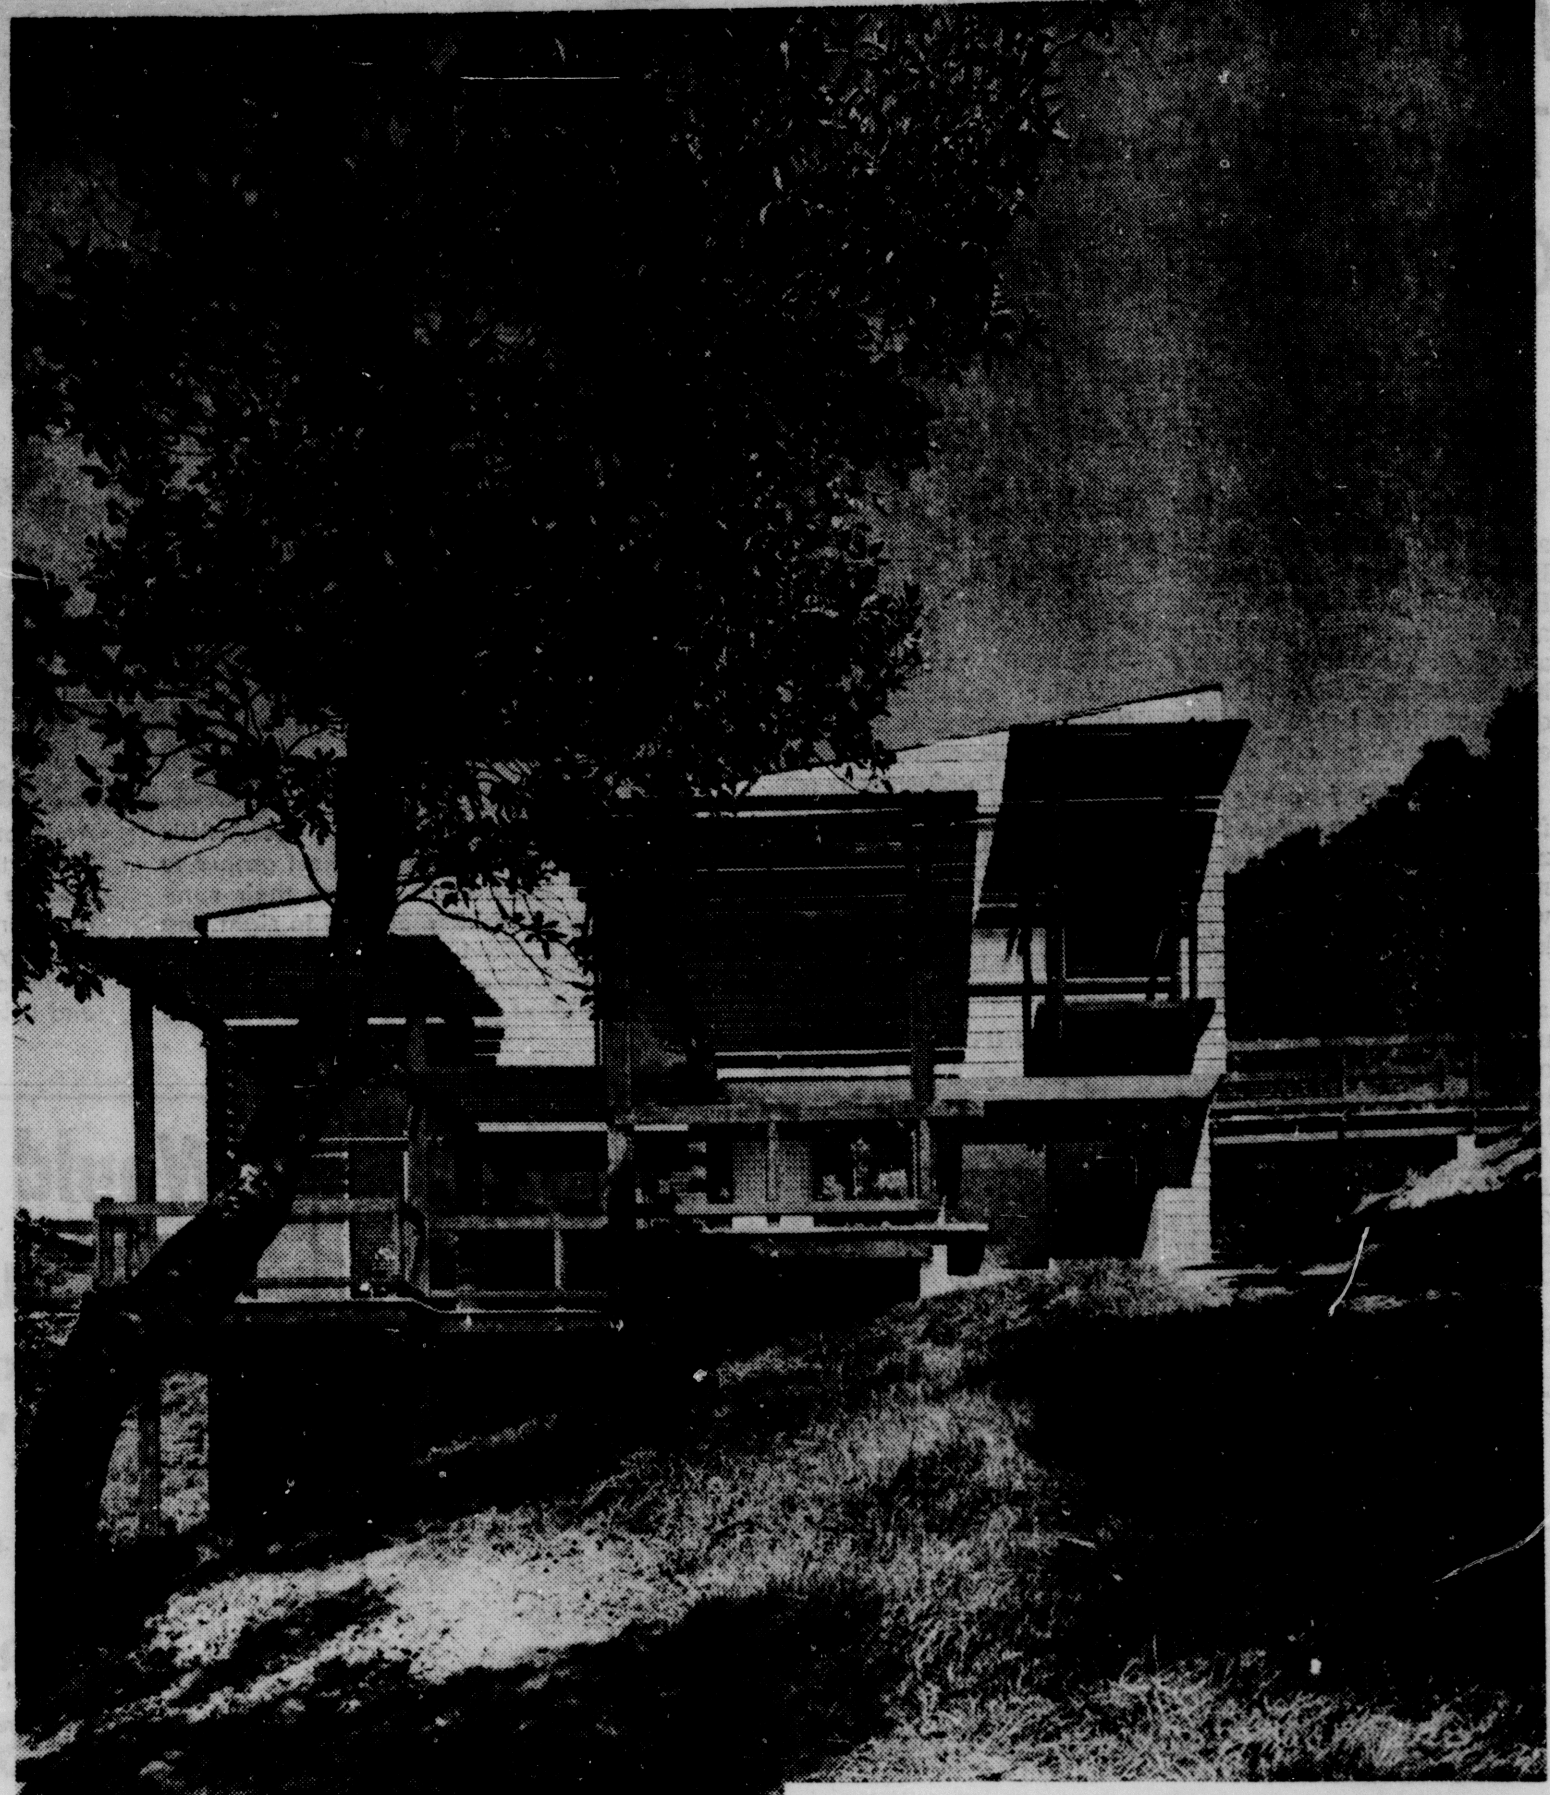

Cited for excellence in design were the homes of Dr. William Cary (Joseph Esherick, architect) and Robert Pense (Marquis & Stoller, architects) in Mill Valley; the Mariner Oaks Apartments (Roger E. Hooper & Associates, architects) in Tiburon, and the Redwood Medical Center (Neill Smith & Associates, architects) in Kentfield.

In addition to the four top merit awards, three other Marin edifices garnered citation awards:

The synagogue of the Congregation Rodef Sholom (Marquis & Stoller, architects) of San Rafael; the Oliver Smith residence (Schubart & Friedman, architects) of Tiburon, and the Mrs. G. W. Cameron home (Sherwood B. Stockwell, architect) in Stinson Beach.

Thirty-six buildings in Northern California were accorded recognition in the first awards program to be conducted by the two chapters since 1957.

Selections were made from 230 entries by a jury composed of eminent out-of-state architectural authorities. Photos, plans and scale models are on display at San Francisco's M. H. de Young Museum.

THE RESIDENCE OF Dr. William Cary, ideally integrated with its scenic Mill Valley site, was one of four Marin buildings to receive top merit awards from the Northern California and East Bay Chapters of the American Institute of Architects. Joseph Esherick was the architect. Photographs, plans and models of the 36 winning structures from throughout Northern California are currently on exhibit at the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park and will remain there through April 15. The exhibition highlights solutions to the increasing problems arising from urbanization.

"REALTY VIEWS"

A Realtor in another city assures action. His ad advises: "If we can't sell it—Burn it Down."

We wouldn't actually advise applying the torch to your property if we can't sell it. Yet, sincerely, a sale is nearly inevitable under ideal conditions.

And what are they? Start with YOUR property. Get it ready for sale, if needed, since top shape is important. Then, of course we assume a fairly good location. Add, a price in tune with the market.

William A. Lewis

The only other factor is TIME. A buyer will appear, through our efforts and your cooperation, if the time doesn't run out.

Occasionally we've sold property the same day it was listed. But other times it takes weeks, even months. That's why we prefer at least 120 days on our exclusive listings.

Sometimes a very good property will not spark much interest. Then, all of a sudden, it "comes to life," with several eager prospects at once.

So, in fairness to yourself and the fire insurance companies, before you burn down your property, give us a chance to sell it.

Marin's Press At The Century's Turn

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles written by W. T. Ortman for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine on his recollections of San Rafael and Marin County at the turn of the century.)

By W. T. ORTMAN

At the turn of the centur · San Rafael had two newspapers, both weeklies.

One was the Marin County Journal, founded by A. I. Barney in 1861. By the late 1890s it had passed into the hands of the Olmsted brothers, also the owners of the Petaluma Argus.

The San Rafael Independent was started in 1900 by H. H. Granice, but his young daughter, Celeste, was soon operating the paper. She had her office and printing shop on the east side of B Street between Third and Fourth.

It was a one-story frame building with two large windows and a door that looked out onto B Street. The entire front of the building was shaded by a porch which extended to the curb.

The building housed a single room about 25 by 50 feet. The two windows and the door permitted sufficient light for the front of the shop. In the center of the ceiling was a skylight which allowed light in the rear part of the shop, where I operated the old George Washington press.

MISS GRANICE had a roll-top desk against the north wall of the room at the front window. On a little oblong plate, atop the desk, printed in gold letters, was "Celeste Granice, Editor." At this desk Miss Granice transacted all business and wrote, let me say, conservative editorials.

She was a small woman and, when not in an animated discussion, was quiet and unassuming. She generally wore a low crowned straw hat with a feather along side the ribbon band. Her street dress was a gray shirt and jacket and white shirt waist. When the weather was warm, she took the jacket off. Her shirt waist had a high collar.

Plain in appearance, conservative in dress and accepting mode or fashion of the day only if it pleased her. She, nevertheless, at times, changed her hair-do. If it became her, she would not wear her hat. She was not quick in changing hats.

FRESH FROM THE University of California where she had prepared for a newspaper career, young Celeste Granice took over the operation of the San Rafael Independent which her father, H. H. Granice, had founded in 1900. It was Miss Granice who hired young W. T. Ortman as the Independent's "printer's devil." Later she became Mrs. Walter Murphy and moved to Sonoma where she and her husband ran the Sonoma Index for 35 years.

"Those silly flower-pot affairs," she would scoff in disgust, "made by male designers in Paris just to make women appear ridiculous. It's an organized move on the part of the inferiority complex of the masculine mind against woman's superiority. And, women aid and abet him by wearing these crazy creations!"

AFTER FULLY giving vent to her pet peeve—"the acquiescence of American womanhood to male domination" — she would go to her desk and write an editorial. She appeared to be at her best when the mind was nettled by some inequity or injustice. Let it be said here that her editorials were not without force or punch. Miss Granice had a natural flare for adjectives. This added piquancy to her writings.

Celeste's father had told her that a newspaper personality should be foot-free and belong to no political party. "Be neither Republican nor Democrat. Be independent." Therein lay the birth of the San Rafael Weekly Independent.

The Independent, as a newspaper without political affiliations, was as truly independent as Miss Granice could keep it. She could belabor both Democrats and Republicans. Political personalities were of the stuff that nurtured her rasping pen.

Theodore Roosevelt was one such.

"The big mouth behind a horse-tail he calls a mustache," scratched her pen across the writing pad. "Never could Theodore Roosevelt have become President of these United States had not a crazy man murdered our beloved President," thus wrote Celeste Granice's pen.

I chanced by the Independent office one afternoon. In the window was a sign, "Boy wanted." Being a boy with an eye for a fast buck, I stepped indoors.

MISS GRANICE and I had an extended conversation. That is, there was considerable talk—but I do not remember saying a word. Miss Granice was doing the conversing.

It was along the lines that I had already became an employee and was receiving my instructions. I was to sweep the floor, wash the windows, dust the furniture, run the job printing press, operate the newspaper press, put together the various sheets and fold it all into a newspaper. Then, after 6 p.m. I was to deliver 160 newspapers to customers about town. After that, the time was my own.

I had come into the office looking for a job. I supposed a normal wage went with the work. Miss Granice had not, as yet, mentioned the recompense.

As she unfolded the details of employment, my mind trailed off into an excited aura of a new world I had never experienced before.

What Miss Granice set forth was not a "job." She was speaking of a "position" and the compensation would be a salary and not a wage.

I SUPPOSED what made me dream was the duration in itemizing the chores to be performed. This was the enchanting part of her soliloquy.

"And," said Miss Granice lightly as she terminated the discussion, "we pay each weekend on Saturday at 5 p.m. Your pay will be one dollar per week."

Directly back of Miss Granice's office, and about six feet from the second window, was a large type rack, placed so as to receive maximum light. On two high stools sat two middle-aged boomer typesetters, who, no doubt, blew into town a few weeks prior to my coming onto the stage. The two wore short-bibbed aprons made of duck. The aprons were dirty.

Each man wore green eyeshades. Also, due to constant scanning small type both men had on cheap gold-plated spectacles.

THEY NEVER spoke but kept their right hands moving ceaselessly over the type rack. However, of the nature of their character I can tell you nothing. Their past, and their character, did not matter in that shop. They were efficient, and that was all Miss Granice cared about.

Miss "G", as we came to call her, did all the business for the shop. She solicited all the advertisements, nosed about town for news, wrote stories and went out seeking job-printing orders.

It was during the time I spent in this shop as a "printer's devil" I learned to know who was who in Marin—what they did and where they lived.

I remember Thomas Boyd, a young lawyer who became Marin County's district attorney. He was a cool and efficient prosecutor. No guilty man ever escaped his clutches.

Another big name that shone high and bright over San Rafael in those days was that of Superior Judge Thomas J. Lennon. Later on he went to the Supreme Court of California as an associate justice.

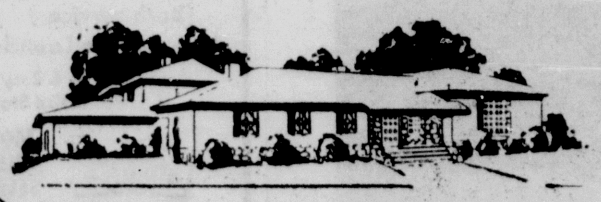

STILL ANOTHER popular one was Sheriff William Taylor.

Among many other names that come to mind are Robert Dollar, A. W. Foster, James H. Wilkins and his brother William E. B. Martinelli; F. M. Angelotti, John F. Boyd and his daughter Louise and Earnest DuBois. These are only a few of those oh so many whose names are written on the scroll of time, and should never be forgotten by San Rafael. They were also family names which appeared very frequently in the Journal and Independent of the time.

In the late autumn of 1903 Michael Cochrane purchased the San Rafael Independent from H. H. Granice, father of Celeste Granice, who had been my boss for nearly two years. Mike moved the presses, type and other equipment across B Street to a rear room in the McNear-Cochrane Building and for some time that became the home of the Independent.

A What-To-Expect Book For Those Faced With Divorce

A Young Marin Attorney Outlines What Lies Ahead For Estranged

By DON KEOWN

Walter T. Winter of Reedlands hopes you never need to consult his just-published book.

But in the unhappy event that your marriage should go on the rocks, he is confident that "Divorce and You" will prove of practical value to you.

It is, he says, his effort to set down in writing a complete, step-by-step explanation of the legal procedures involved in dissolving a marriage.

WINTER IS qualified to write such a book because he is an attorney with offices in San Francisco who specializes in the field of domestic relations. Prior to being admitted to the bar he had previous experience with domestic strife while working as a private detective.

Why did he decide to write such a book?

"Because," the young lawyer says, "very few people go into divorce with any realistic idea of what is going to happen. And their lawyers simply cannot take the time to tell them all the things that they can read in this book."

The book is, he stresses, aimed entirely at the layman —not at lawyers.

"It started out four years ago as a simple little manual for my own clients," he explains, "and blossomed into this book as it grew bigger and bigger."

He says he knows of no other published which serves the same purpose.

THE EARLY and intermediate chapters outline for the man or woman facing divorce the steps which they must expect to follow starting with the selection of an attorney. And there is a closing chapter which tells the reader what to do and how to handle his or her life after divorce — "to help them adjust to their new status."

Winter, a native of Germany, came to the United States in 1939. He is a graduate of the City College of San Francisco and the Golden Gate College School of Law.

He is a member of the State Bar of California, the San Francisco Bar Assn. and its domestic relations committee, the San Francisco Lawyer's Club and its domestic relations committee, the Section of Family Law of American Bar Assn. and other professional groups.

In the process of reading the book, Winter believes, the person about to become involved in divorce will have many misconceptions cleared up. An example: The popular belief that California divorce law is weighted in favor of the women against the men. In Winter's opinion, this simply isn't true.

BUT, WINTER says, the committees upon which he serves are constantly striving for needed reforms.

"I feel," he says, "that we need something more than just a change in the law. We need a fundamental change in our whole basic approach to this problem."

For instance, he favors better preparation of our young people for marriage in the field of domestic relations.

"I would have it taught in the schools, not by the same teacher who instructs in history and mathematics, but by a trained specialist," he states. "One such professional person could instruct at several schools in much the same manner as our driver education programs began with law enforcement officers as traveling instructors."

ANOTHER OF Winter's proposals: The licensing of marriage counselors.

"There are now many fine marriage counselors," he says. "But the hard truth is that anyone can hang up a shingle. And sometimes unqualified people can do more harm than good. I think qualification standards should be set and enforced."

In his book Winter advises his reader:

"The sooner a couple realizes that their relationship is deteriorating, the more hope there is of avoiding divorce, because they can begin to take positive steps to settle their own differences . . .

"DO NOT LET false pride prevent you from seeking the aid of an unbiased outsider who has the confidence and respect of both parties, for example, your minister, doctor, a marriage counselor or attorney . . .

"If you seek professional aid, it is of the utmost importance that you approach the problem with an open mind . .

"After all else has failed, you should give serious consideration to the consequences of a divorce action . . . Both parties will have a multitude of problems . . . Regardless of the length of time you were married, you must be prepared to make substantial adjustments . . .

"But in spite of these facts, the weight of the problems need not be crushing. The failure of your marriage does not, in and of itself, indicate a personal failure . . ."

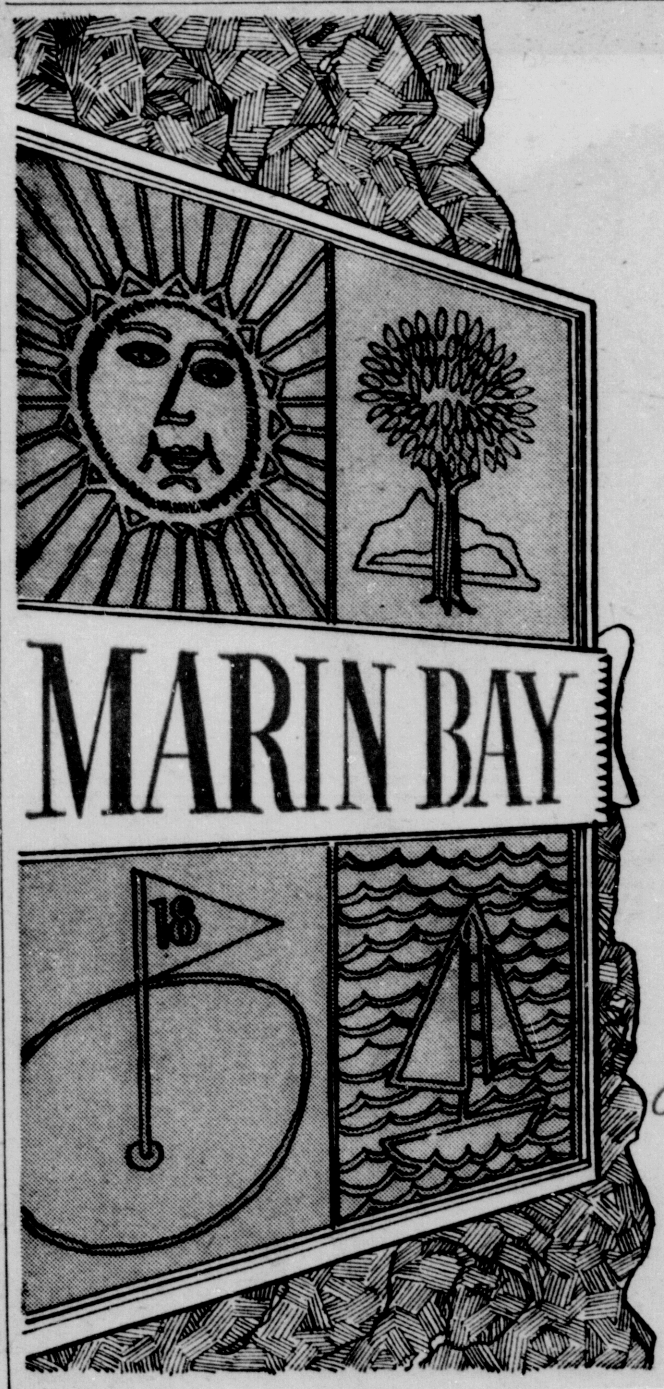

WINTER IS himself a happily married man whose divorce court experience has been limited strictly to that of counsel and (during his private detective days) witness. He, his wife Linda, and their 2-year-old daughter Wendy have been Marin residents for two and a half years.

The Crowell-Collier Press is the publisher of his new book, priced at $2.95.

It is, he feels, a bargain which can save both heartbreak and money for those about to be plunged into a divorce action. And with about one out of every four American marriages headed for such a break-up, Winter should not be lacking for readers.

ATTORNEY WALTER T. WINTER is a happily married man, but he is also an authority on divorce since his law practice is in the field of domestic relations. Here, in his Reedlands home with wife Linda and baby daughter Wendy, he examines the book he has just had published. Entitled "Divorce and You," it is a step-by-step explanation of divorce procedures. (Independent-Journal photo)

MILL VALLEY PHOTOGRAPHER Georgia Longini has waited patiently until she is certain her young subject is in a relaxed and realistic mood and pose. Now she is ready to take the picture. The photographer says she spends from two to six hours with a youngster before she is able to get just the picture she wants. Some examples of her work and her insistence on capturing on film "the real child" can be seen on these pages. (Photo by Joy Holman)

The Birdie Is Passe'

That old standby—"Look at the birdie!" — is definitely passe' in photographing children.

"All it and similar devices ever got the photographer was an artificial smile," she says.

"Today we feel we must get beyond that point and show the true child."

SO PATIENCE and understanding are substituted for such devices.

Mrs. Longini, a professional photographer for seven years, says that "in many ways children are much easier to photograph than adults.

"It does take patience and work. But no matter how difficult the child might be, he or she does not reflect the tensions and self-consciousness of adults.

"There is an openness and honesty of expression that is not generally available in adults."

Mrs. Longini's advice to those who would photograph youngsters:

"You should be able to project yourself into the child's world. You almost have to become a child yourself. For you must make him feel that you are a friend."

FOR THE child who flatly refuses to cooperate, there is usually a cause, she says.

"Almost invariably the child is angry about something—usually with his parents. He knows his mother is dying to have the picture taken, and therefore feels he is in control and in a position to gain revenge for some fancied slight.

"Sometimes I ask the mother to go shopping. While she is gone, I talk to the child about his dislikes and find out why he is angry. Soon we are great friends and the picture-taking proceeds."

THE PARENT who decides to take a picture of his own child operates under a big handicap, Mrs. Longini feels.

"The situation is too formal and the parent usually too hurried to get the kind of picture that shows the child as he really is," she explains.

But with patience, tact and understanding, the proud parent can come up with something better than the usual snapshot of a pouting, giggling or squinting offspring.

Sausalito's Calvin Kentfield Shines As Short Story Writer

By DON KEOWN

It has become customary to refer to Sausalito's Calvin Kentfield as a novelist, and yet it seems to us that he is at his best as a short story writer.

Certainly we feel that "The Great Wondering Goony Bird," a just-published collection of 10 Kentfield short stories, supports that judgment.

Kentfield's stories, especially those about the seafaring men who are his favorite subjects, have a virile masculine feeling that in no way interferes with his sensitivity and basic sympathy for his characters. He is particularly adept at conversation in the vernacular. And his tales never fail to contain some important and basic truths about life.

There are no "weak sisters" among the 10 stories which have been recorded in "The Great Wondering Goony Bird." But the several featuring the cocky young merchant seaman Davy Humble and those two old salts Mr. Solly and Blades are standouts. Here's an appealing trio of which we would never grow tired.

SPORTSCASTER Russ Hodges, with an assist from freelance writer Al Hirshberg, has authored a mildly amusing account of his love affair with the baseball Giants in his just-published "My Giants."

Most of what Hodges relates has been reported before in the sports pages. But if his isn't one of the meatier baseball books, the sportscaster, nevertheless, does come up with enough anecdotes and inside dope to make the reading fun for any Giant fan. And, of course, the admirers of Hodges as a sports commentator will get a special boot out of the book.

RUSS HODGES
Baseball anecdotes

It is written with the professional competence that is the usual stamp of a book in which Hirshberg has collaborated.

It's fun to relive those Giant pennant years of 1951, 1954 and 1962, as well as the near misses in other years. Names like Dusty Rhodes, Bobby Thomson, Sal Maglie, Monte Irvin bring back fond memories. And Giant addicts can never read enough about Willie Mays, Billy Pierce, Orlando Cepeda and today's other heroes.

Hodges has been criticized for a lack of objectivity in his play-by-play coverage of Giant games. It is to his credit that here he attempts no pretense of being a journalist. Instead, he makes it plain that he regards himself as one of the Giant family—answerable primarily to the ball club and, of course, his sponsors in the performance of his duties.

Whatever your feelings about that attitude, it is refreshing to find that Hodges makes no effort to gloss over it.

IN HIS NOVEL "Celebration of Fools," Lawrence Hughes has attempted an expose' of American college life of the 1960s and, more specifically, of the social fraternities and sororities.

No doubt Hughes has chosen a fertile field for such a probe. But he weakens his case—and his book—badly by overstating it.

His collegians, almost without exception, are cynics, cheats, opportunists or parasites. Now very probably there are a number of "country club" type campuses in the country where many students are primarily preoccupied with their social lives, sex and sports, and where studies are relegated to secondary status. But Hughes has so exaggerated the immoral and amoral aspects of his characters that they lack the appeal of realism. It then becomes difficult to accept Hughes' story as a reasonable representation of or a serious criticism of collegiate life.

ON THE BASIS of his first suspense novel, "Love in Amsterdam," Nicolas Freeling is already being compared with the master of that genre, Simenon. And, indeed, there is a striking resemblance in their work.

It lies partially in the European or cosmopolitan flavor—as well as setting — of their novels. The two writers share an ability to transmit not just a physical description but also the atmosphere of their chosen locales with great realism. But it lies more in their ability to give added dimension and complexity to their characters with a strong emphasis upon the psychological. They are adept at presenting the human animal as the mixture of vulgarities, cruelties and the more tender and admirable attributes that he actually is.

As the title indicates, Freeling has chosen Amsterdam as the setting for his first book. There an unwise romance lands a young writer in police custody as a murder suspect. And he must rely upon a rather crude, but shrewd, police inspector to clear him.

British-born, French and Irish-educated, now a resident of Holland, Freeling seems supremely qualified for the role of an international favorite among the writers of police and suspense novels. And on the basis of this first novel, he appears destined for just that role.

FOR ESCAPIST reading, you can hardly go wrong with either a good "chase" novel or a spy thriller.

In his "The Fifth Passenger," Edward Young has combined those two sub-classifications of the suspense yarn into a very readable novel.

The setting is England — principally a small seaside town. A young lawyer becomes involved with a naval officer to whom he is deeply obligated—and who is in the process of defecting to the Soviet Union.

It is Young's first effort in the suspense field and a most creditable one. The pace is fast, the local color excellent and the characterizations interesting.

THE LITTLE KNIGHTS DRAGON by Denise and Alain Trez, World Publishing Co., $3.

That tried and proven team of writers and illustrators of children's books, Denise and Alain Trez, has come up with a new hero to delight the little ones.

This time they spotlight a boy knight with a rather unusual outlook on the traditional pursuit of dragon-slaying.

The book is a charming combination of humor and fairy tale. The Trez illustrations, as usual, are colorful and lively. The book is an excellent choice for the preschooler.

The Space Gap

RED STAR IN SPACE by Martin Caidin, Crowell-Collier Press, 288 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

When Sputnik I sailed into orbit on Oct. 4, 1957, it signaled no sudden "breakthrough" for Soviet Russian astro-knowledge. The Russians had been ahead for years. And they're still ahead.

This is the central theme upon which Martin Caidin, aviation writer and former missile consultant to the U.S. Air Force, hammers again and again through the 288 pages of "Red Star in Space."

With equal intensity and repetition, he drives home the reason why: The USSR has placed all its space exploration under a single agency. Military rockets (developed from those captured from the Germans at the close of World War II, but by Russian, not "captive German" scientists) are used as the boosters; but the military is subservient to the overall space agency.

In the United States, on the contrary, jealousy and dispute between the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the military—and between the Army, Navy and Air Force within the military —has fragmented the effort, and continues to fragment it. So the Russians were sending truck-sized satellites, loaded with animals, into orbit when the best we could get into space were the size of toys.

Caidin explodes also the stories of Russian "secret failures" and of Russian disregard for the lives of Soviet cosmonauts. In each case, he points out, the Russians announced launching of a satellite before its success was assured. And the Vostock space vehicles have elaborate arrangements for safety of their human cargo which our Mercury satellites lack.

Caidin's style is that of a sledge-hammer, which makes "Red Star in Space" rougher going that it might be; but the information it contains is worth reading by anyone interested in the science that may soon bring man new worlds to conquer.

Witty Satire

In addition to books for children, radio plays, a theater play and five novels, John Bowen has also written plays for television. He puts his television experience to good use in his latest witty tasirical novel, "The Birdcage."

His main targets are the packages of "Culture" with the big and little "c's" doled out to the cinema and television audiences of England by accidentally-chosen "experts" who are poorly-qualified, self-styled guardians of the arts. This parallels the attacks currently popular in the United States by the critics of the purveyors of "culture for the masses" such as mail-order sales of oil paintings.

Bowen's story is about the events of a year or two in the lives of Norah Palmer and Peter Ash, who, when the story opens, have been living together for nine years without marriage, an arrangement satisfactory from the point of view of tax saving, they say.

If Peter Ash's and Nora Palmer's reasoning and arrangement seem shallow, it is to John Bowen's credit as a gifted writer that he makes their story interesting.

They serve as a foil to bring out sympathetic concern for the secondary character, Edward Laverick, a retired civil servant who happened to have written a play supposedly praised by Shaw.

Bowen closely weaves the stories of Peter Ash's decision to break his alliance with Norah Palmer and Norah's professional intention to exploit Edward Laverick. In the process we get a clear picture of the contemporary London scene.

THE STEREO SCENE

Listening To The New Discs

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

Let's listen to some of the new recordings:

A TREASURY OF FOLK SONGS FOR CHILDREN—Elektra EKL-223 (2 lps for price of 1).

An enriching experience for the tots. Story-telling American folk songs performed by more than a dozen top singers, including Glenn Yarbrough, Ed McCurdy, Jean Ritchie and others. A "color-me" section is bound into the colorful album.

BRAHMS: Symphony No. 1 in c, Carlo Maria Guilini conducting The Philharmonic Orchestra — Angel Stereo S35835.

Guilini does very well by Brahms in this sequel to his earlier Angel release of the First Piano Concerto. A sticker on the cover recommends this lp for "Your Basic Library." If your basic library already includes the Four Brahms Symphonies by Klemperer (and it should if it does not), never mind this one. You won't be able to tell the difference. Klemperer also records for the Angel label.

THE DUKES OF DIXIELAND—DIXIELAND HOOTNANNY!—Columbia Stereo CS 8671.

A combination of two more differing styles of music also attempted recently: Jazz and folk-music. Delightful, if Dixieland is your cup of tea. The Dukes are turning out more musical performances now than when they were on the Audio-Fidelity label, and Columbia's sound is just as good.

MAHLER: Symphony No. 1 in D "Titan" — Paul Kletzki, Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra.— Angel Stereo S-35913.

The first-born of Mahler's great series of world containing masterpieces and one of the most accessible of his compositions. The brilliant sound of this release makes it easy to retire the old Scherchen mono performance from my shelf of favorite lp's.

OLATUNJ / FLAMING DRUMS!—Columbia Stereo CS 8666.

Third lp for Columbia of percussive and exciting African music, flavored with Western seasoning—including such top jazzmen as Clark Terry on trumpet and George Duvivier on bass. Contrary to popular thought, African music is not all drum-beats — eight vocalists add much melodic interest to this lp.

A House Of Style, Comfort

The Iversens Got Just What They Wanted

Marin Living

THE SLOPING, PROTECTED lot, surrounded by dramatic eucalyptus trees, provides the Iversens with complete prviacy in their Pigeon Hollow Road home. This in turn adds to the enjoyment derived from the kidney-shaped swimming pool and the generous area for sunning.

The Everett Iversens had liked their first Marin County home in the country club area.

So, when they decided they needed a roomier residence, it was logical that they also decided upon a larger house that was, otherwise, quite similar to their previous home.

And it was also to be expected that they selected the contracting firm which had built their first Marin home so satisfactorily to also construct the second house.

SO IT WAS that the William McDevitt Co. of San Rafael planned, engineered and constructed the attractive showplace at 36 Pigeon Hollow Road, San Rafael, in which the Iversens have made their home the past two years.

Located on a sloping, protected lot surrounded by dramatic eucalyptus trees, the home has complete privacy, loads of sun and an extensive outside living area.

As one enters the entrance hall through double-louvered doors opening from a covered porch, the foyer presents a gracious touch of hospitality. The entrance hall windows form shelves where Mrs. Iversen has displayed a rare old Bohemian glass collection to catch the sparkle of the sunlight.

To the right of the foyer is the home-like all-electric kitchen done in pink and beige. A shell linoleum offsets the pink with gold-splattered Formica counter which runs the full length of the oversize kitchen.

AN UNUSUAL feature is the triple bay wide windows which Mrs. Iversen has decorated with pink ruffled curtains. This too is covered with Formica and is charming with a simple accessory such as a copper chafing dish overflowing with fresh fruit.

Adjoining the kitchen is a pleasing family room furnished in Provincial. A raised hearth used brick fireplace casts a pleasant glow on the glazed mahogany walls, plank floors, tweedy couch and maple furniture. Here the family breakfasts and enjoys other informal meals around a cozy circular table.

The Iversens, who have one daughter at home, Linda, 14, and a married daughter, enjoy entertaining, especially so since their living and dining room is beautifully furnished in beige tones. A wool carpet complements the quilted antique satin custom circular sofa. Interest and contrast is furnished by Mrs. Iversen's choice of both mahogany and walnut woods.

TWO MATCHING Mr. and Mrs. armchairs are attractively done in chintz. These are placed against a solid brick wall which houses the attractive fireplace. Dramatic lights in turquoise and rose and a grand piano add distinction to the room.

One end of the huge room is divided into a formal dining room separated from the formal living room by a storage divider which holds all of Mrs. Iversen's china and glassware. The top of the divider is a planter with many beautiful specimen plants. Mrs. Iversen has chosen Duncan Phyfe to add period charm to this intimate room.

The all-glass walls in the living room slide open to the entertainment and pool area. Here family and friends enjoy a kidney-shaped pool surrounded by a pebbled aggregate patio. Ferns, a lily pond and lush greenery complete the interesting setting. An automatic pool cleaner gives the family more time for swimming and less time for work.

THE BEDROOM wing provides a lovely room for guests, furnished with a four-poster bed, and in rose and white decor. Linda's room, as befits a teen-ager, has twin beds, lavish closets and is femininely furnished in orchid and white.

The master bedroom in oyster white has a focal wall featuring a wisteria mural. Mahogany furniture sets off the antique oyster white spreads and matching wool carpets.

Two very fine bathrooms featuring tile tubs and showers and counter top vanities were provided as well as a third bathroom to accommodate poolside guests.

The exterior of the home is a masterpiece of landscape engineering, for a creek was diverted to enhance the effect and huge natural rocks add to the authentic and unspoiled effect. This unusual feature was executed by Bob Wilson of Woodacre under the direction of the McDevitt firm.

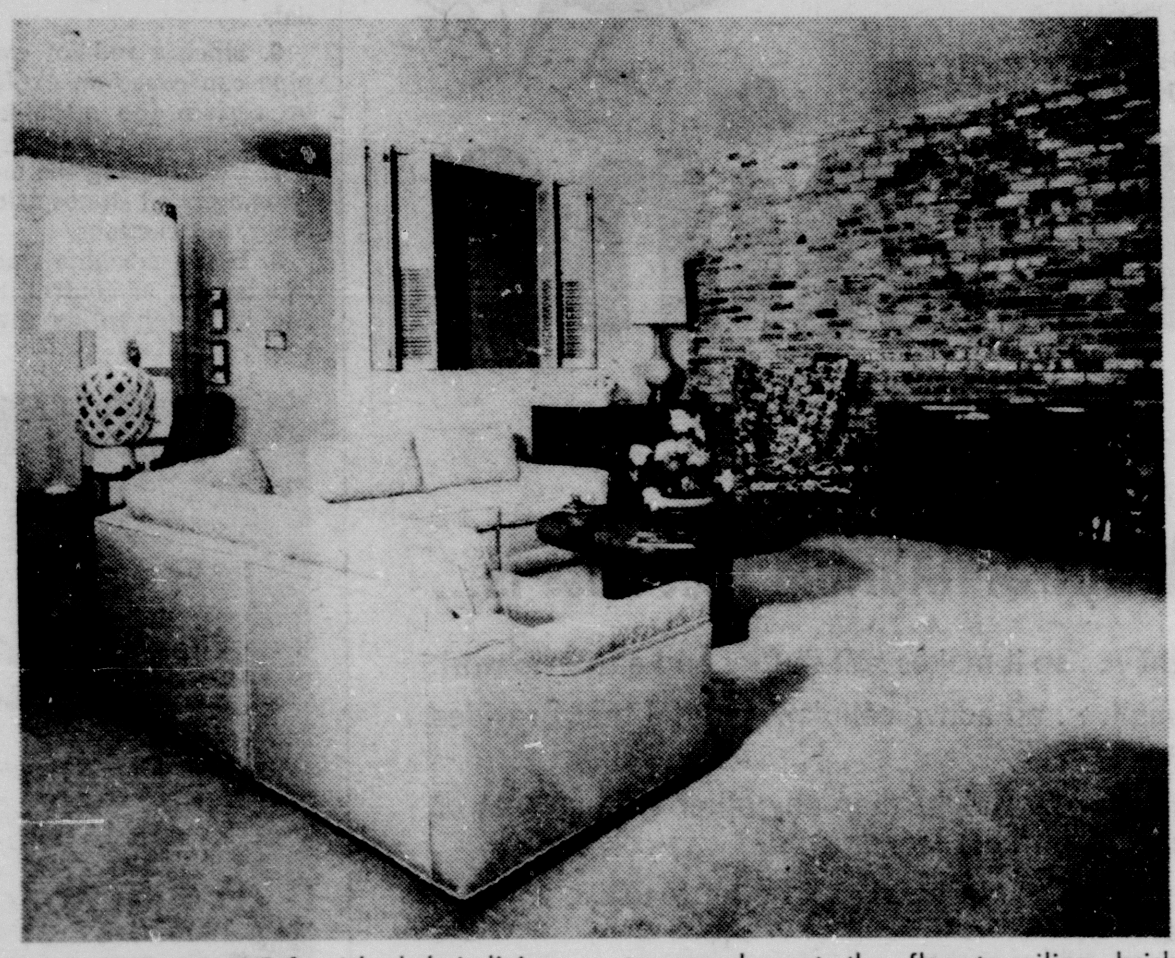

A TWO-CAR garage is attached to the home and many lavish storage areas are included.

Redwood siding has been used for the exterior finish stained in a soft coffee tone.

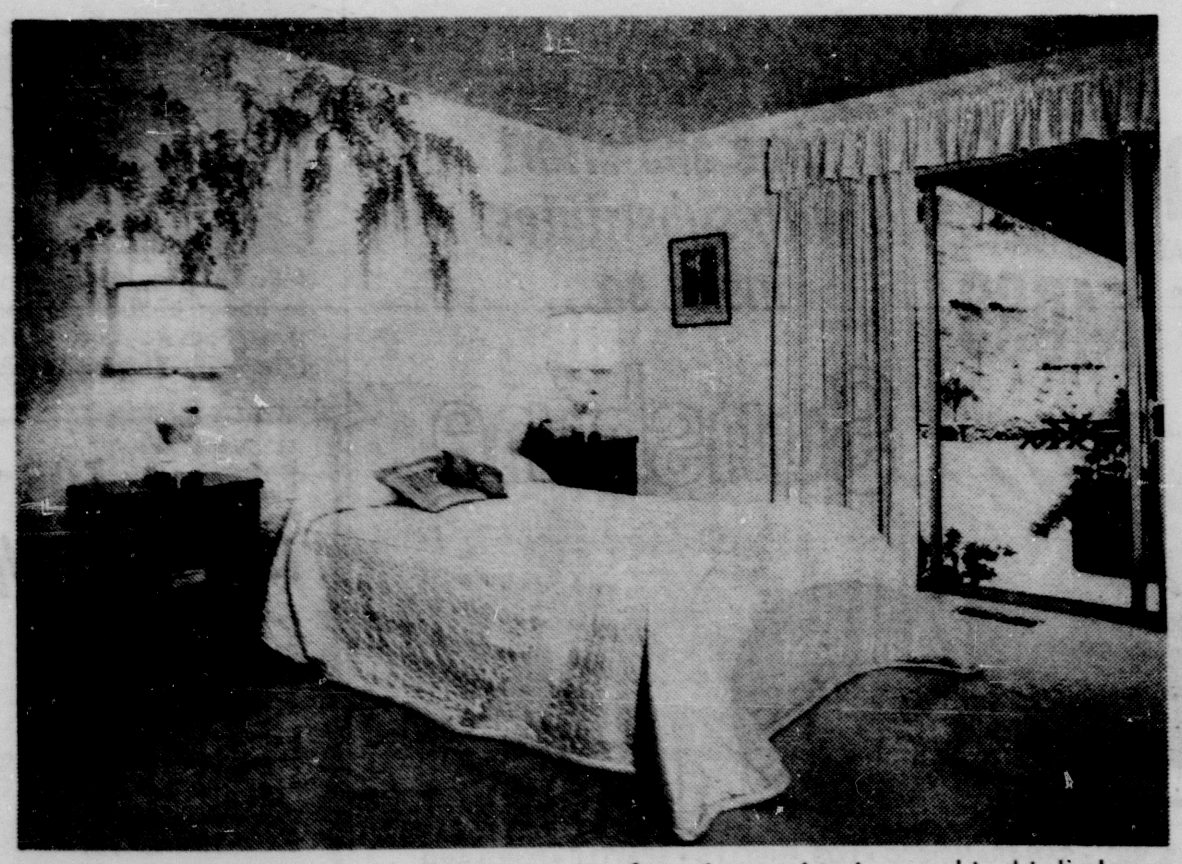

The Iversens are very happy in their home and feel that they were able to secure from the builder exactly what they wanted in style and living comfort.

THE FAMILY ROOM in the Iversen home features a raised used-brick fireplace. Glazed mahogany walls and plank floors set off the comfortable furniture to fine advantage.

THE IVERSENS HAVE furnished their living and dining room beautifully in beige tones to complement the floor-to-ceiling brick wall which houses the attractive fireplace.

OYSTER WHITE SPREADS and carpets were chosen by the Iversens to offset a focal wall featuring a wisteria mural in this bedroom. Note the sliding glass wall to the secluded patio area.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Plant hydrangeas for lavish summer display.
- Plant fuchsias now. Try some of the hanging types in overhead containers.
- Feed lawns now and go after any lawn weeds with a chemical control. Your nurseryman will recommend one.
- Plant daylilies this month for late spring and early summer bloom.
- Plant tigridia bulbs for midsummer bloom. The triangular, spotted blooms are real attractions in July and August.

Those Power Mower Accidents Can Be Eliminated With Care

Just Follow These Simple Rules And Your Machine Will Be Safe

Power mower manufacturers spend millions to make their machines as safe as possible— yet nearly 80,000 accidents are recorded each year from this cause alone.

Less than 10 per cent of these accidents are due to mechanical failure or malfunction in the mowers themselves. The rest are due to human error and are preventable.

WE ASKED a first aid authority for a few simple safety rules to remove the power mower from the category of deadly weapons.

He came up with this list:

1. Never start a power mower from an insecure position.
2. Always stop the machine completely before refueling or attempting to remove clogged grass.
3. Don't allow children to use or play with or near a mower.
4. Avoid pulling a mower backwards because of the danger of rolling it over a foot.
5. Housewives should not use a mower while wearing flimsy shoes or open-toed sandals.
6. Since a red-hot exhaust pipe can cause an explosion, be certain the machine has cooled before refueling.
7. Before using the mower, clear away all stones, wires or other obstructions.
8. If the machine starts to wander out of control, throw out the clutch rather than pit human strength against full-on power.
9. Where slopes are steep, a helper to pull and guide, using a rope attachment, will increase the margin of safety.
10. Never leave a mower running and unattended.

After compiling the list, our expert said these additional points should be kept in mind:

BUILT-IN guards should cover all moving and revolving parts; handles should be long enough to prevent machines from pulling back; ground wires or three-pronged plugs should be used on all electric-powered machines; and rear deck extensions should be at least four inches or more beyond the revolving blade.

And being a first aid authority, our informant said every householder should know the elementary principles of first aid and know where the emergency kit is located. A minimum list of equipment which should be on hand at all times includes antiseptic dressings, bandages, gauze, sterile cotton, adhesive tape and adhesive bandages, sterile eye pads, ammonia inhalents, a pair of sharp scissors and a couple of single-edge razor blades.

THE GARDEN PAGE

Don't Landscape Your Yard Until You First Have A Plan

No man would ever think of building a house without first having a set of plans. And by the same token, no gardener should ever consider "building" his landscape without knowing what he is doing.

Yet there are gardeners by the carload who set out to do just that and the results, to say the least, are unsatisfactory.

THERE IS the occasional natural landscaper who envisions his ultimate garden and achieves it in time without any plans. What he has done it to visualize his plan and put it down in his memory—a feat which most of us are totally incapable of doing. For better or for worse, we have to have our plan on paper.

Whether you are starting a new garden or remodeling an existing garden, take these words of caution from the California Assn. of Nurserymen: Plan before you plant. You'll save time, grief and money, to say nothing of gray hairs.

A plan is essential and a good plan is the best thing you can treat yourself to. The initial cost is somewhat more, but savings over the years will more than make up for it, as noted above. Once you have the plan, you can carry it out gradually, as time and pocketbook permit, for a good plan will serve you just as well a year or more from now as it does now.

HOW DOES one go about getting the plan? Probably the best way is to seek the services of a landscape architect or advice from a local nurseryman about this. Some nurserymen are professional landscapers themselves, and those who are not can recommend one or more.

If you are knowledgeable in the ways of plant material and have access to some good landscape guides, you can try your own hand, of course, and many suitable plans have come from such a tact.

Basically, the plan for a Marin garden should include the following:

First a suitable approach to the house. With new houses you can start from scratch, but with older homes you have to purge yourself of the idea that any part of the status quo must be preserved. Existing walks may seem permanent to you, but if they are poorly placed, bisecting the garden in the wrong place, then don't hesitate to rip them out and start over.

OUTDOOR LIVING areas are the next essential, and while these are usually at the side or rear of a house, they need not be. Occasionally the outdoor living area is better placed in front and enclosed by a fence to take better advantage of exposure or shelter from prevailing wind.

Consider this aspect when drawing up your plan.

Trees are an all-important factor and since they take years to reach good size, every effort should be made to preserve those already existing on the site. Occasionally, a tree is so poorly placed, however, that it blocks light or traffic and generally makes a nuisance of itself. In such cases there is nothing for it but to relegate it to the wood pile.

A good lawn is probably the most pleasurable part of a landscape, and site permitting, it should be carefully planned. Some sites slope too much to accommodate a lawn, but wherever possible, one should be included. Even a small lawn will yield up untold pleasure with its cool, green presence.

IN THE MATTER of plant material to fill in, around and under the patios, lawns and trees, you had best count heavily on a nurseryman's advice. Plant relationships are everything in the landscape and it is easy to place incompatible shrubs next to each other without realizing it until too late. At least let a nurseryman check your plant selections before you start planting.

All this and more (including such niceties as garden pools, play areas for children, work areas for the amateur plantsman) should go on your plan.

If you still feel competent to prepare it yourself, take pencil and paper in hand, draw your lot to scale, plot the house on it and start filling in the above essentials. If the job seems herculean, which is likely, contact a landscape specialist or check in with a nurseryman and ask directions. You won't be the only one who does.

THE NATIVE flowers of South Africa are appearing in American gardens with increasing frequency. They are particularly adaptable to California, since they find the climate familiar. The Gazanias, above, will provide Marinites with bright color in return for very little care. Just plant them in pots or as borders where they can catch plenty of sunshine.

The Dogwood Too Often Overlooked

In the garden world, few sights are more enchanting than a dogwood in bloom. The delicate, almost fragile appearance of this fine shrub has spring written all over it and more's the pity that Californians haven't made wider use of it than they have.

Especially here in Northern California, the dogwood deserves more attention than it seems to get. Our seasons here are more sharply defined, our winters colder, and this is what a dogwood likes.

WE SPEAK not of the native dogwood which graces our foothills in the Mother Lode and Yosemite. These are better left in their native habitat, unless you are a specialist in natives. Rather, we speak of the dogwoods of eastern gardens, some fine samples of which are to be found in all our central and northern counties.

These dogwoods have an easily recognized pattern of growth, which is rigidly horizontal. They seem unbending, but with the unbending grace which a talented gardener achieves by use of his pruning shears. The flowers are not actually flowers, but bracts which cover the barren branches in a sudden burst of color each spring.

IN SPRING'S cycle of bloom, dogwoods hit their peak in March after the flowering plums, deciduous magnolias and flowering crabapples have had their days. Plant them therefore, where these others which have already come into leaf won't hide the dogwood's beauty with their foliage.

The two varieties which nurserymen offer locally are the White Flowering Dogwood and the Pink Flowering Dogwood, the latter is most popular. Both will make sizeable shrubs, even small trees, in time.

BRAVO IS a shout of approval in many languages, and is therefore entirely appropriate as the variety name of this new dianthus. The Bravo is easy to grow, adaptable to any climate. It is a hardy annual that grows to eight or 10 inches tall. Its most unusual feature is its color—a loud red.

Marin's Climate Presents Special Border Problems

Volumes have been written about the garden border and how it should be planted. Yet, only a few paragraphs apply to Marin.

For most of the books we've read pertain to colder climates where the border is conveniently hidden under a blanket of snow during winter months.

CALIFORNIA'S climate is wonderful, but it also keeps the gardener on his toes. When we plant a spring or summer border, we have to consider what it will look like in winter. We must hold back some bloom so that it lingers on into fall and beyond.

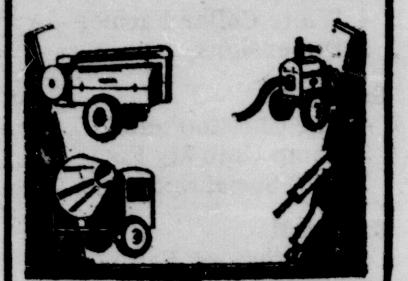

First off, we can rely heavily on the use of perennials—not herbaceous perennials, necessarily, which die down when their cycle is completed, but shrubby perennials such as Lavender and Marguerite, Red Hot Poker, Geranium and Dusty Miller. Into these we can then blend our more seasonal perennials such as Delphinium, Columbine, Phlox and Yarrow.

Secondly, there should be heavy use of bulbs—Gladiolus, Dahlias, Agapanthus and Cannas, which you can plant now for summers; and the whole list of spring-flowering bulbs which you can't plant until next fall.

THIRDLY, YOU should look around for shrubs with more than the average capacity for color. The compact, shrubby Lantanas come to mind, or perhaps a Shrimp Plant to show off its bronzy bracts through summer and fall. Other shrubs such as the sword-like New Zealand Flax or Bamboo are fitted to borders despite their lack of bloom.
